Race Strife: Massive $$ Cure

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential commission demands compassionate, massive and sustained efforts—perhaps costing more money than the Vietnam war—to end the destruction and bitterness wrought by racial disorder in America's cities.

"Our nation is moving toward two societies, one black, one white—separate and unequal," declared the President's Commission on Civil Disorders. It condemned white racism as a central cause and warned:

"If we are heedless none of us shall escape the consequences."

Unless immediate action is taken, the commission said, "large-scale and continuing violence could result, followed by white retaliation, and, ultimately, the separation of the two communities into a garrison state."

Many Recommendations

It reeled off scores of recommendations, including vastly expanded programs to provide 2 million jobs, 6 million housing units, drastically improved slum schools and overhaul of the welfare system designed to guarantee all Americans "a minimum standard of decent living."

The commission didn't estimate the cost of its proposals, saying only they "will require unprecedented levels of funding and performance." It seemed obvious, though, that the price tag could exceed even the $25 billion annual outlay for the Vietnam war.

The aftermath of Watts, Newark and Detroit — Even riot veterans are awed by some weapons as city after city prepares for summer and the riots they hope won't occur. Story Page 22.

New taxes must be imposed if necessary, the panel told President Johnson, but "there can be no higher priority for national action and no higher claim on the nation's conscience."

The White House had no immediate reaction to the report. Comment in Congress was sparse—probably because the document was released two days earlier than planned and most congressmen hadn't received a copy.

But even before its release, one major question was being raised.

"Where," asked Rep. George H. Mahon, D-Tex., "are we going to get the money?" He heads the House Appropriations Committee.

So sweeping was the commission's bundle of recommendations that even its members conceded chances of Congress approving all of them were nil.

The 11-member group issued a 12,000-word summary report Thursday night—four months ahead of the deadline set by Johnson—after learning a newspaper had obtained a copy and was planning to publish it. The rest of the report—250,000 words—will be released Saturday night, the original date.

Long Investigation

The commission spent seven months investigating riots in Newark, Detroit and 21 other cities. It concluded: "The urban disorders of the summer of 1967 were not caused by, nor were they the consequence of, any organized plan or conspiracy."

But militant organizations and individual agitators, it added, "helped to create an atmosphere that contributed to the outbreak of disorder." And it warned "that the continuation of disorders and the polarization of the races would provide fertile ground for organized exploitation in the future."

Time and again, the report hammered away at the growing division in America.

"Segregation and poverty have created in the racial ghetto a destructive environment totally unknown to most white Americans," it said. "What white Americans have never fully understood—but what the Negro can never forget—is that white society, is deeply implicated in the ghetto. White institutions created it, white institutions maintain it, and white society condones it."

And the panel went beyond proposing aid only for Negroes in the slums. Now is the time, it said, "to make good the promises of American democracy to all citizens—urban and rural, white and black, Spanish-surname, American Indian, and every minority group."

Among the commission's proposed remedies:

—Immediate action to create 2 million new jobs in the next three years—1 million by private industry and 1 million by local, state and federal governments. In the first year, it urged 250,000 public-sector jobs and 300,000 private-sector jobs.

—Tax incentives and other subsidies for industries that locate in poverty areas, both urban and rural, and which give on-the-job training to hard-core unemployed.

—Vigorous moves to flatten artificial barriers to employment, "including not only racial discrimination but, in certain cases, arrest records or lack of a high school diploma." It said federal funds should be withheld "from activities which discriminate on grounds of color or race."

—Sharply increased efforts to eliminate de facto segregation and racial discrimination in all schools, North and South, by sternly applying civil rights laws.

—Early childhood education for "every disadvantaged child in the country," increased aid

Negroes, Whites: Much Applause

NEW YORK (AP) — A wave of applause rolled up from some Negro and white spokesmen today for the President's riot commission report, a document that laid heavy stress on "white racism" as a major cause of America's racial tensions.

Many Others Reluctant

Many influential leaders, white and Negro, were reluctant to speak out before they had a chance to read the full text. But there were few dissenting voices among those who did. And a number pointed out they had long blamed the same evils, and recommended similar solutions.

"Good," was the verdict of Roy Wilkins, a commission member and executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"For the first time in any report it points to racism in American life, all through American life, on every level and in every geographic region as a basic cause of the attitudes which led and can lead to riot."

"That's the crux of it, right there," agreed Floyd McKissick, Black Power leader of the Congress of Racial Equality.

"About as far as you can realistically go," said Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., also a commission member and the first Negro senator since reconstruction.

"I think we're getting into major surgery. You might even call it a heart transplant."

Brooke said there was some evidence that Republican congressional leaders Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and Rep. Gerald R. Ford of Michigan may accept a number of the proposals.

Heartily in Accord

Atlanta Mayor Ivan Allen, whose police chief, Herbert Jenkins, was a commission member, said he was "heartily in accord with the general suggestions," and plans to "create a staff committee of city officials to carry out the recommendations . . . at a city level."

Allen added that he "might question the feasibility of creating two million new jobs . . ."

"Surprisingly good in the sense that many of us had expected a much more watered down version of the facts," was the comment of James Farmer, former CORE head and now a Liberal party candidate for Congress from Brooklyn.

But, Farmer said, it misses "the desperate desire on the part of many ghetto dwellers to have a significant measure of control over their own lives," and "fails to understand that the militant spokesmen are not creating atmosphere, they are merely reflecting an atmosphere that already exists."

Other Reflections

Seattle Mayor J. D. Braman: "This is not new. The U.S. Conference of Mayors and the National League of Cities have been saying this for a long time. If the report will assist the cities in obtaining more federal aid for better housing and helping private enterprise to foster equal employment, then it has value."

Cleveland Mayor Carl Stokes, a Negro: "... The basic answers to the problems posed in the report can be met only by a large commitment from the middle class white persons in this country ..."

Cleveland Safety Director Joseph F. McManamon: "... Sounds as though it covers the field."

Edwin C. Berry, executive director, Chicago Urban League: "... Great ... I hail the report and give great credit to Gov. Otto Kerner and the commission for not hiding the facts ... what remains for us to examine is what we will do to implement it."

John A. McDermott, director, Catholic Interracial Council, Chicago: "It sounds as though the commission has done a real service to the nation by saying that the riots were not the result of a conspiracy in the Negro community, by pinpointing white racism as the real source of the problem."

The Governors' Parley: It's Now or Never for Rocky

NOW OR NEVER—New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller hands his coat to an aide as he arrives at a Washington Hotel for session of the National Governor's Conference. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two Republican governors have advised their colleagues they better start pushing a draft-Rockefeller bandwagon now or it may never get rolling.

Govs. Spiro T. Agnew of Maryland and Tom McCall of Oregon, who long have urged Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller to enter the GOP presidential race, expressed certainty Thursday the New Yorker will not lend himself to any last-ditch attempt by party moderates to stop former Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Agnew and McCall made clear they are interpreting Rockefeller's position as demanding substantial support from party moderates—including most of the 26 GOP governors—before he'll consider running.

The advice by the two Rockefeller backers was indirectly echoed by Nixon, left virtually alone in the GOP race by the abrupt withdrawal of Michigan Gov. George Romney.

Nixon said in New Hampshire that Rockefeller will have to enter some state presidential primaries if he wants the nomination.

"No one is going to be drafted for this nomination," said Nixon. "No one is going to back into it."

Whether the 21 GOP state executives attending the National Governors Conference in Washington would find time to caucus among themselves remained questionable.

McCall said he hoped to circulate a round-robin to the governors by mail and get 15 or 16 of them to sign, urging Rockefeller to make himself available as a candidate before the March 19 close of filing in Oregon's May 28 primary.

If that can be accomplished and accompanied by a petition signed by about 30,000 Oregon citizens, McCall predicted Rockefeller would change his mind.

The Oregon governor forecast an almost dead heat between Nixon and Rockefeller if both were on the Oregon ballot. He indicated he doesn't think a write-in for the New York governor, now being organized, could top Nixon's total if the latter were the only major contender formally on the ballot.

Agnew indicated he also may circulate a round-robin. He said he thinks this must be done within 30 days if it is to be effective.

GOP Gov. John A. Volpe of Massachusetts, chairman of the National Governors Conference, told a news conference he doesn't believe there will be unanimity at this time among the Republican state executives on a candidate. Volpe, said he expects to lead the Massachusetts delegation to the convention as an uncommitted favorite son.

500 Khe Sanh Attackers Repulsed by Rangers

KHE SANH, Vietnam (AP) — More than 500 North Vietnamese soldiers attacked the Khe Sanh Combat base through the fog before dawn today. They got to the barbed wire ring around the base before they were driven back with at least 70 of their men killed.

The Red infantrymen charged behind three sapper platoons in the attack on the base's eastern perimeter, which is held by a battalion of 500 crack South Vietnamese Rangers.

A flight of the U.S. Air Force's huge B52 bombers, flying in direct support of ground troops for the first time in the war, dropped tons of explosives only 750 yards in front of the Rangers' lines.

The besieged U.S. Marine base in the northwest corner of South Vietnam was on a Red alert—meaning an attack was believed imminent—when the enemy soldiers came lunging through the darkness and mist.

Some of the Communist sappers succeeded in placing Bangalore torpedoes under the coils of barbed wire that circle the two-square-mile base, but they were killed before they could trigger the charges.

This afternoon a twin-engine cargo plane crashed and burned as it was attempting to take off from Khe Sanh. The crew and passengers escaped, but some were injured. As firemen rushed out to extinguish the flames, Communist gunners bracketed the wreckage with two mortar rounds, wounding several of the firefighters.

Heaviest Yet

The early morning attack was the heaviest ground assault launched so far against the 5,000 U.S. Marines and 500 Rangers holding the Khe Sanh base. An estimated 40,000 Communist troops are believed massed across the northern frontier for an invasion of South Vietnam's two northernmost provinces, with the Khe Sanh base their first objective.

Lt. Col. David Lownds of Plantation, Fla., the base commander, said that when the attack came on the heels of a heavy mortar, rocket and artillery bombardment, he thought "this might be the big attack, but it was just another probe."

He said Communist troops also made several other small attacks along the line held by Marines in the northeast and southern sections of the base.

Allied casualties in all the attacks were "very light," U.S. officers said.

The North Vietnamese launched their biggest assault from trenches they had dug to within 50 yards of the Rangers' lines in the past week despite the daily repeated strikes by U.S. warplanes.

The B52 Stratofortresses, which normally bomb no nearer to allied positions than 3,000 yards, cut their sights to within 750 yards of the Rangers to hit what was believed to be the enemy assembling area for the assault.

Big Bag at Sea

U.S. and South Vietnamese naval forces meanwhile reported their biggest single bag of the war—the destruction of three 100-ton Communist trawlers loaded with Soviet AK47 assault rifles and ammunition along the coast. Another of the 100-foot vessels fled out to sea and escaped.

The U.S. Command said one of the trawlers was blown up by its crew to escape capture and the other two were shot up in flames by U.S. Navy and Coast Guard boats, infantrymen firing from the beach and planes attacking overhead.

One battle on the beach was still under way this afternoon, with the Communists firing from the beach at allied forces attempting to approach one of the wrecks that had been shot up and grounded near Nha Trang.

The Assembly Seat Sweepstakes: Bell, Machione Officially Entered

By LYNN MULVANEY
CHARLES BERMPOHL

Attorney H. Clark Bell and Republican City Alderman John Machione have made it official. Both have announced their intention to seek the assembly post being vacated by Kenneth L. Wilson.

Bell, speaking at a 9 a. m. press conference this morning, said he has garnered support from both the young and established segments of the GOP party and is pleased that the reaction to his candidacy is broad based.

Machione, minority leader of the Common Council, announced his intention to seek the Republican nomination at a meeting of the City Republican Committee last night.

When reached by phone this morning, city chairman John Ray Mayone said the committee will not endorse anyone "at this time."

A similar decision was also made last night by the Esopus GOP committee. "We intend to ride it out until we know who all the candidates are," Frank Kelly, committee chairman said today.

The Esopus Republican executive committee will meet again shortly "and then we'll take a stand," he added.

Four Now Entered

Bell's and Machione's announcements bring the total number of official commitments to four. Earlier this week Peter Savago, chairman of the County Legislature and Saugerties attorney William Brinnier both announced they will seek the nomination to the office of assembly.

When asked about the possibility of a primary, Bell said he hoped the issue would be resolved at the convention (March 25). "A primary can leave a mark on a political campaign," he said, but "I will be geared to go into a primary."

Bell revealed that he had been considering running for the congressional seat but had decided last Sunday not to seek that post. He planned to announce the fact Monday. It was that same day that Assemblyman Wilson stated he would not be interested in another term.

Bell, who led the ticket with both Republican and Conservative endorsement for Constitutional Convention delegate in 1966, said he considers Savago a serious candidate. He is a good friend, I like him. He will be a formidable opponent."

Republican Thomas Mayone, special investigator for the district attorney's office has already announced his intention to seek the nomination to oppose incumbent Democrat William B. Martin.

Urged to Run: Bell

Bell, a delegate to the Constitutional Convention, told the press today that he has been urged to seek the office.

Since Monday, he said, people from all parts of the county have called volunteering to help in any way they might. This has been most gratifying to me.

Bell said he has mailed a letter of declaration to every committeeman in the county and has given them a resume, asking for their help.

The 33-year-old lawyer formerly served on the staff of former Congressman J. Ernest Wharton and was an intelligence officer for the United States Central Intelligence Agency.

He also served as research counsel on many joint legislative committees in Albany involving studies of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Law, off-track betting, the City of New York finances and the Waterfront Commission.

Others Possible

Although only four have officially declared themselves in the assembly contest, several other potential candidates have been talking it up. They are Saugerties lawyer and partner of Brinnier, Louis P. Francello; Kingston insurance man, Lawrence Quilty; county legislator Joseph Martorana, and WGHQ president Harry Thayer.

Liddy on the Fish Word: A Welcome and Surprise

Gordon Liddy, Republican Candidate for Congress, today responded to Ham Fish's announcement of his candidacy by welcoming him into the race.

Liddy noted, however, "I am mildly surprised that Ham waited so long to make his intentions known. Joe Resnick has been campaigning, via his trips to Nigeria, Vietnam and Sicily, since his reelection in 1966. Resnick was made aware of the value of early campaigning in 1966 when that technique proved so successful in capturing the critical vote of Dutchess County.

"I trust," Liddy added, "that in the forthcoming weeks Ham will have the time to form his views, and make his positions clear. At a later date the public will be called upon to evaluate the merits of the views I have expressed, and those Ham may state."

Demonstrator In 5-A Status

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A 37-year-old college professor, whose draft classification was changed to 1-A, or top priority, after he took part in an antiwar demonstration, has been returned to 5-A status, too old for military service.

Leo Arnica, vice chairman of Local Board 84 here, confirmed Thursday that the reversal had taken place in the case of J. Henry Braun, a former Buffalo resident who now is an assistant professor of English at Temple University in Philadelphia.

Braun, married and the father of two daughters, surrendered his draft card to the U.S. Justice Department during a peace D.C. last Oct. 20. He was re-demonstration in Washington, D.C. last Oct. 20. He was reclassified by the local board Dec. 13.

"At the time, the board felt Braun had violated the statutes of the Selective Service System ...," Aronica said, adding:

"The board later was notified by Selective Service that Braun could not be drafted because he was over the cut-off age (of 35).

Phase I Complete For Recreation Park in Red Hook

Phase I of the Red Hook Recreational Park reached successful completion yesterday with the purchase of 16 additional acres of land for extensive recreational facilities.

The $10,000 investment in land and building expands the site to 20 acres of developable land adjacant to the northern boundary of the Red Hook Village. Present at the closing were Warren Simmons, town supervisor; Norman Thomson, former owner of the property and Willis Weisz, chairman of the park board of directors. Thomson donated the original four acres of land.

Began in August

The project started in August of last year is designed to provide a full range of recreational facilities for residents of the Red Hook School District. Long range plans call for completion of the complex by 1972. It is hoped that construction of a swimming pool, Little League ballfields and picnic grove can be started this fall and be completed by the spring of 1969 in time for Memorial Day opening.

Eventual features include tennis courts, putting green, fishing facilities, ice skating and a wide range of game areas.

As the park plans go into Phase II, residents of the school district will be contacted in a fund raising drive.

A public meeting will be held March 22 to recap the last 12 months of activity and review future plans for the park.

Free to Residents

When completed the park will be free to all permanent residents of the school district with the exception of pool facilities for which there will be a charge. Cost of construction of the 5,000 square foot, L-shaped main pool and adjoining wading pool will be approximately $55,000.

Community fund raising events for Phase I included auctions, dances, sale, historic home tour, mother and teacher basketball game and a horse show.

Memorial Day Store Closing Law Expected

Ulster County is expected to have a local law which will prohibit most commercial establishments from doing business on Memorial Day this year.

A schedule of meetings and the ultimate presentation of the local law draft to the County Legislature was outlined Thursday by Legislator Joseph Martorana, R-9th District, chairman of the Veterans Committee.

The committee met Wednesday night with representatives of county veterans groups who presented their recommendations. The talks included Sidney Lane of the Kingston Veterans Association which represents several veterans groups in the city, and former Saugerties Supervisor Peter M. Williams, past commander of Ulster County American Legion, and James Coppersmith, county Legion commander.

According to recommendations certain types of businesses, those usually open on Sundays may be excluded from the closing law.

Martorana said these exclusions will be further discussed at a combined meeting Wednesday, March 13 with representatives of area department stores, super markets and other businesses involved. After the results of this session are discussed at a final meeting of the committee before the end of March, it is expected that a local law will be drafted for presentation at the April session of the County Legislature.

Should the Legislature favor enactment of such a law arrangements will be made for a public hearing and possible adoption of the law.

In addition to Martorana, the Veterans Committee includes Frederick Pizzuto, R-9th District; William West, R-Woodstock; Orrie Riehl, D-Kingston, and Richard Thornton, D-Saugerties.

Blames LBJ for Crisis

Urging opposition to the renomination of Lyndon Johnson, who he said "has led us to the third most serious crisis in our history," CDA advocate Thomas L. Collins, of Great Neck, L. I., addressed the Woodstock Democratic Club last night.

He said the current problems of the United States were "next only to the Civil War and the Great Depression."

Collins, an advertising executive, active worker for Adlai Stevenson during two campaigns and an insurgent winner of public office himself on Long Island, was guest speaker for the art colony political club at a meeting in St. Gregory's Episcopal Church Hall Thursday night.

As a spokesman for the Coalition for a Democratic Alternative, Collins accused President Johnson of "deserting the American people and the Democratic party, and committing this nation to 'going it alone' instead of with our allies as had both presidents before him."

In this, his remarks bore an echoing resemblence to those made by another CDA speaker, Allard Lowenstein in New Paltz Tuesday night. Lowenstein had insisted that the Democratic party is the party of Roosevelt and not of Johnson and that Johnson "has stolen it from us in the night, and changed everything other Democratic presidents did or stood for."

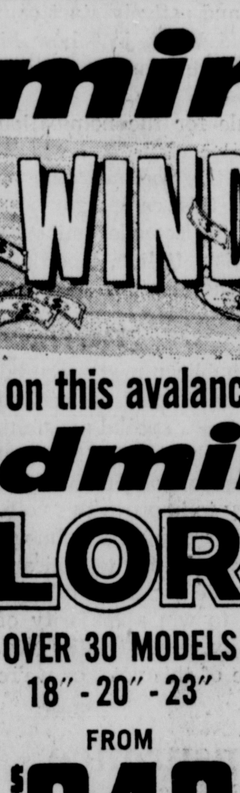

In urging support of Sen. Eugene McCarthy of Minnesota for president, Collins said he offered the dissatisfied a choice, a man who will stand up for the traditions of the party and carry on those traditions."

In a hard-hitting eight point speech, the visiting CBA speaker told the Woodstock audience "this nation's priorities have become distorted because of the war, with $35.4 billion being spent yearly for war and only $2.6 billion for the citizens of America."

He charged that Johnson could end the war tomorrow, has passed up many opportunities for negotiations, and must assume the responsibility for changing America's role from one of military advisor and financial supporter to "fighting the fight" for those who should fight it themselves. He said our role should be to "help the South Vietnamese win, not replace them on the battlefield."

Collins also insisted that the issue in this campaign is not just Vietnam alone, but the fact that it is tied in with all our problems, including crime in the streets, poverty and lack of adequate housing, increased taxes, and a need for more educational excellence.

Phase I Complete For Recreation Park in Red Hook

Phase I of the Red Hook Recreational Park reached successful completion yesterday with the purchase of 16 additional acres of land for extensive recreational facilities.

The $10,000 investment in land and building expands the site to 20 acres of developable land adjacent to the northern boundary of the Red Hook Village. Present at the closing were Warren Simmons, town supervisor; Norman Thomson, former owner of the property and Willis Weisz, chairman of the park board of directors. Thomson donated the original four acres of land.

Began in August

The project started in August of last year is designed to provide a full range of recreational facilities for residents of the Red Hook School District. Long range plans call for completion of the complex by 1972. It is hoped that construction of a swimming pool, Little League ballfields and picnic grove can be started this fall and be completed by the spring of 1969 in time for Memorial Day opening.

Eventual features include tennis courts, putting green, fishing facilities, ice skating and a wide range of game areas.

As the park plans go into Phase II, residents of the school district will be contacted in a fund raising drive.

A public meeting will be held March 22 to recap the last 12 months of activity and review future plans for the park.

Free to Residents

When completed the park will be free to all permanent residents of the school district with the exception of pool facilities for which there will be a charge. Cost of construction of the 5,000 square foot, L-shaped main pool and adjoining wading pool will be approximately $55,000.

Community fund raising events for Phase I included auctions, dances, sale, historic home tour, mother and teacher basketball game and a horse show.

Memorial Day Store Closing Law Expected

Ulster County is expected to have a local law which will prohibit most commercial establishments from doing business on Memorial Day this year.

A schedule of meetings and the ultimate presentation of the local law draft to the County Legislature was outlined Thursday by Legislator Joseph Martorana, R-9th District, chairman of the Veterans Committee.

The committee met Wednesday night with representatives of county veterans groups who presented their recommendations. The talks included Sidney Lane of the Kingston Veterans Association which represents several veterans groups in the city, and former Saugerties Supervisor Peter M. Williams, past commander of Ulster County American Legion, and James Coppersmith, county Legion commander.

According to recommendations certain types of businesses, those usually open on Sundays may be excluded from the closing law.

Martorana said these exclusions will be further discussed at a combined meeting Wednesday, March 13 with representatives of area department stores, super markets and other businesses involved. After the results of this session are discussed at a final meeting of the committee before the end of March, it is expected that a local law will be drafted for presentation at the April session of the County Legislature.

Should the Legislature favor enactment of such a law arrangements will be made for a public hearing and possible adoption of the law.

In addition to Martorana, the Veterans Committee includes Frederick Pizzuto, R-9th District; William West, R-Woodstock; Orrie Riehl, D-Kingston, and Richard Thornton, D-Saugerties.

Safety Theme At P-TA Meet

Safety will be the topic discussed at the March meeting of the Tillson Parent-Teacher Association. Kate Howe, president, has announced that Jack H. Lupton, of the Kingston Office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will speak on Safety and present a film, FBI, narrated by Jack Webb. The meeting will be held Monday, March 4, at 8 p. m. at the school.

Plans will also be made at this time for the annual penny social sponsored by the association. Refreshments will be served following the meeting.

Few Feathers

The rare marvelous hummingbird of Peru has only four tail feathers, two of which are several times longer than the bird itself and are tipped with feathered flags. The other two are shaped like long thorns.

Blumenthal to Speak At Abortion Forum

The issue for abortion will be March 6 with State Assemblyman Albert H. Blumenthal as guest speaker.

The program, sponsored by the Ulster County Young Democrats will be held in the county legislature's chambers at the Ulster County Office building, Main and Fair Streets.

Blumenthal is the author of the therapeutic abortion bill now pending before the state legislature. Also slated to speak is Louis J. Dolan, prominent Rockland County and New York City attorney.

After opening statements, the speakers will answer questions posed by a panel of local leaders.

Included within the local panel are Rabbi Jonathan Eichhorn of Temple Emanuel, 243 Albany Avenue; the Rev. Henry Perry, pastor of the Bethlahem Temple of 155 Tremper Avenue; the Rev. James F. Lover, professor of canon law at Mt. St. Alphonsus Seminary in Esopus; Dr. Hamilton Boyd, well known Kingston and Hudson Valley obstetrician, and Hubert Richter, Kingston city judge.

Questions will deal with the morality of abortion, the legal rights of the unborn versus the rights of the mother, and the medical feasibility and propriety of such a law.

The entire program will be broadcast as a public service by radio station WKNY starting at 7:35 p. m. A special telephone number is being planned in order to allow interested listeners to call in questions at the completion of questioning by the panel.

Medicare Date

Deadline for those aged 65 to sign up for the medical insurance part of Medicare is April 1. Those not enrolled by that date will have to wait a year and pay more to get the coverage.

Information may be obtained by contacting the Kingston Social Security office, 57 Albany Avenue, Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Thursdays to 7 p.m.

Blames LBJ for Crisis

Urging opposition to the renomination of Lyndon Johnson, who he said "has led us to the third most serious crisis in our history," CDA advocate Thomas L. Collins, of Great Neck, L. I., addressed the Woodstock Democratic Club last night.

He said the current problems of the United States were "next only to the Civil War and the Great Depression."

Collins, an advertising executive, active worker for Adlai Stevenson during two campaigns and an insurgent winner of public office himself on Long Island, was guest speaker for the art colony political club at a meeting in St. Gregory's Episcopal Church Hall Thursday night.

As a spokesman for the Coalition for a Democratic Alternative, Collins accused President Johnson of "deserting the American people and the Democratic party, and committing this nation to 'going it alone' instead of with our allies as had both presidents before him."

In this, his remarks bore an echoing resemblence to those made by another CDA speaker, Allard Lowenstein in New Paltz Tuesday night. Lowenstein had insisted that the Democratic party is the party of Roosevelt and not of Johnson and that Johnson "has stolen it from us in the night, and changed everything other Democratic presidents did or stood for."

In urging support of Sen. Eugene McCarthy of Minnesota for president, Collins said he offered the dissatisfied a choice, a man who will stand up for the traditions of the party and carry on those traditions."

In a hard-hitting eight point speech, the visiting CBA speaker told the Woodstock audience "this nation's priorities have become distorted because of the war, with $35.4 billion being spent yearly for war and only $2.6 billion for the citizens of America."

He charged that Johnson could end the war tomorrow, has passed up many opportunities for negotiations, and must assume the responsibility for changing America's role from one of military advisor and financial supporter to "fighting the fight" for those who should fight it themselves. He said our role should be to "help the South Vietnamese win, not replace them on the battlefield." Collins also insisted that the issue in this campaign is not just Vietnam alone, but the fact that it is tied in with all our problems, including crime in the streets, poverty and lack of adequate housing, increased taxes, and a need for more educational excellence.

Rockefeller's Position

Governor Romney's withdrawal from the 1968 Presidential race has given moderate leaders in the Republican Party including GOP governors, who say they favor Governor Rockefeller, the focus for their energies. The business of trying to get the nomination for Rockefeller now should get underway full steam with serious moves by the moderates.

Governor Rockefeller's recent statement that he would run if the convention nominated him gives the governors and other moderate leaders the nod to continue their efforts for his candidacy. So the battle lines are drawn and the pro-Rockefeller moderates don't have to wait for the big push. It was felt by many that delay and inactivity would hurt him against the surging drive for Nixon.

David Lawrence in his dispatch in an adjoining column mentions three barriers to Rockefeller's nomination: Failure to support Senator Goldwater in 1964; his position on the side of labor unions in the recent New York City garbage strike; his divorce and remarriage.

Although his divorce is a personal matter, many women voters are against his nomination because of it. As we previously pointed out, with a vote potential of four million more than men, the women's vote can be decisive in the national election this fall. Nixon already has set out to capture it.

Rockefeller has been silent on one of the most important matters confronting the nation — the Vietnam war. Before they openly and actively start campaigning, his supporters should know just how his policies differ, if they do, from the Johnson administration.

While the aspirants struggle for the nomination, Ray C. Bliss, national committee chairman, will be shaping the campaign to help the nominee win the election. An essential part of this campaign is to capture an increased share of the so-called minority vote — the Negro, Jewish, Polish, Italian, labor and other groups. Without them, the electoral votes of the major cities which control the 10 big states cannot be won.

For instance, in 1966 the Republican party secured 19 per cent of the Negro vote, up from 7 per cent in 1964; under Clarence Lee Towns Jr., special assistant, the goal for 1968 is 35 per cent. Only about 12 per cent of the Jewish vote normally goes Republican; Bernard Katze, New York lawyer, will try to improve this vote. The labor leaders publicly support President Johnson, but the rank and file lean toward the Republicans and will be actively sought to vote for the party.

"We know we're not going to win a majority of any of these ethnic or nationality groups," Bliss said, "but we've got to get our share of this vote, or we're in trouble."

Automobile Insurance

Should damage suits in automobile accidents be abolished? The American Bar Association will make a major study of this question in the coming year. This decision came after lawyers concerned with the growing backlog of automobile accident cases threatened to fight a proposal upholding the present system of negligence suits.

Massachusetts, the first state to make compulsory automobile liability insurance a requisite for registering an automobile—New York also has such a law—is considering a bill that would compensate all auto accident victims, regardless of which driver was at fault. The law passed the House of Representatives easily last year but was turned back by the Senate.

Authors of the bill assert that a reduction in administrative cost as a result of eliminating lawsuits for lesser accidents would bring substantial savings in premiums. Opponents say the bill would produce double the number of claims, with both drivers in an accident claiming damages.

In many parts of the country, negligence suits for automobile accidents damages have mounted beyond the capability of the court system to handle them. Damage awards have also mounted so high that insurance rates have become a large part of the cost of owning a car.

The ABA study will be welcomed if it can solve this question. If it becomes mired in the argument between negligence lawyers and insurance lawyers, the public interest would be lost, and a bad situation will get worse.

Last March, a Federal court issued an order for the schools of Alabama to desegregate, except for the capital, Montgomery. Now, Montgomery has been ordered to desegregate its dual school system and faculties by next fall. The Federal courts are moving inexorably to complete nationwide desegregation.

When about 75 students and faculty members walked out on Vice President Humphrey at American University, Washington, he pointed out: "No freedom of speech for reactionaries, socialists, warmongers, peaceniks, soon becomes no freedom of speech for anyone." Extremists never realize this when they walk out on speakers they disapprove.

Who Says They Learn From History?

David Lawrence Says

Battle Lines Are Drawn For Nixon-Rockefeller

WASHINGTON — The lines now have been drawn for a contest between former Vice President Nixon and Governor Rockefeller of New York for the Republican nomination for the presidency.

For a long time it has been conjectured in political circles that Governor Romney's preconvention campaign was made possible largely by the help of Governor Rockefeller. The Michigan governor may have pictured a Rockefeller-Romney ticket. Mr. Romney himself publicly acknowledged the aid which his campaign received from Mr. Rockefeller.

The strange vicissitudes of preconvention campaigning, however, all but eliminated Gov. Romney several weeks ago when he said he had been "brainwashed" while he was being briefed by American officials in Vietnam. This political blunder weakened his position with many Republican leaders. They felt that, while Mr. Romney was frank and outspoken, he was not politically sophisticated or he would not have used this terminology.

Governor Rockefeller has for many months now said he is not a candidate, but the pressure to nominate him has been continuing among his friends and supporters. Their theory has been that, if a sufficient demand arose, he would accede to it. It was not surprising, therefore, when a few days ago the New York governor said publicly that, while he did not expect to be "drafted," he would run if the convention nominated him.

In politics this is tantamount to launching of his candidacy. The mere fact that there has been an effort in the New Hampshire primary, which is to be held on March 12, to have Gov. Rockefeller's name written in on the ballot — though without his consent — has given rise to widespread speculation that the Rockefeller candidacy could no longer be regarded as inactive or passive. Likewise, the timing of the Romney announcement of withdrawal, to be made this week while 45 of the nation's governors are here for a conference, is in itself significant. For many of the Republican governors favor Rockefeller for the presidential nomination.

There are many barriers, on the other hand, to the nomination of Governor Rockefeller. He antagonized a lot of the Republican rank and file when he failed to support Senator Barry Goldwater as the Republican nominee in 1964. He has never repudiated that action, though he has said publicly that he will support the presidential nominee of the Republican party this time whoever he happens to be.

Another barrier is the position of Governor Rockefeller recently in New York City's garbage strike. He took the side of the labor unions in opposition to the stand of Mayor John Lindsay, a fellow Republican. This did considerable harm to Rockefeller's prospects, as many businessmen throughout the country were alienated. They are not likely to be enthusiastic about any Republican nominee who assumes a pro-labor attitude.

There is still another handicap from which Governor Rockefeller suffers. Immaterial as it may be to drag into the campaign the fact that he was divorced and later remarried—as this is a personal matter and really has nothing to do with the choice of a presidential candidate — Republican politicians say that women voters in many partes of the country have expressed themselves emphatically against the nomination of Rockefeller. Any substantial loss of the Republican women's vote would, of course, be a serious factor on Election Day next November. Indeed, some of the Republican leaders say that they have been told by many voters that they would rather have President and Mrs. Johnson continue in the White House than see Governor and Mrs. Rockefeller move in there.

The candidacy of the New York governor, however, will undoubtedly be pressed by his supporters. Coincidentally, the Republican leaders who control many state delegations and want to see former vice president Nixon nominated will intensify their effort to build up a wide margin of delegate strength.

The biggest single advantage on Mr. Nixon's side is that he was vice president of the United States for eight years with President Eisenhower. The general might even campaign for the man who was his close associate during two presidential terms.

Drew Pearson Says

South Vietnamese Cooperated With U.S. Command at Pleiku

(Editor's Note: Jack Anderson today continues his spot news reporting from the Vietnam war front.)

PLEIKU — An intelligence report warned that the Viet Cong were bunching for an attack on Pleiku, and I flew up from Saigon to see exactly how the VC operated in thir recent daredevil strategy. By the time I arrived, Col. John W. Barnes of Washington, D. C., had already ordered an alert.

Pleiku was where the war escalated. It was in response to a sneak attack on the American barracks here that President Johnson on Feb. 7, 1965, first ordered the bombing of North Vietnam.

Today, many strategists regard Pleiku as the key to control of South Vietnam. For this is the main bastion in the central highlands — the Annamitique Mountains — which form the backbone of South Vietnam and dominate the country.

The best place to watch developments, as the Viet Cong maneuvered in the night, was inside the joint U. S.-Vietnamese command post, a three-room beehive crackling with radio signals. Huge wall maps speckled with red and blue triangles and circles, pinpointed the location of our observation posts and ambush patrols. Ominous red dots showed where Viet Cong had been reported.

Capt. Brian McEnay of Dunedin, Fla., the duty officer jotted more red dots on the operational map around the village of Plei Yan, six miles northwest of the city. Word had been received from Vietnamese agents that livestock, not belonging to the village, had been spotted. It was assumed that the Viet Cong probably were using the animals to carry heavy rocket launchers.

A hot line, manned by Vietnamese, squawked raucously. It was another report on the livestock. Orders went out to the artillery units to fire H and I (harrasment and interdiction) rounds at random around the village.

Capt. McEnany scribbled in the logbook: "1900. Village of Plei Yan has much livestock in village. Sector reports this as unusual. H & I commences around the village."

'Illumination Requested'

An hour later, the other hot line jangled. This one, manned by Americans, had a more conventional ring. A helicopter pilot reported that the Viet Cong had opened fire on him a few miles southeast of the city. This coincided with a report from a prisoner that a Viet Cong unit had moved into this area with mortars.

McEnany circled the area on the map and marked "AW" (automatic weapons) in the center of the circle. He recorded in the logbook: "2005. Hel. took AW fire."

He had scarcely completed the entry when the Vietnamese hot line squawked again urgently, followed within seconds by the more clamorous jangle of the American hot line. Observation posts 11 and 12 had spotted small-arms fire in the southwest section of Pleiku. They requested illumination.

Moments later, whomp! whomp! whomp! Three flares were fired by an artillery unit only a few hundred yards away.

A C-47 Dragonship, circling overhead like an eagle watching for prey, also swung over the area. Many a nest of Viet Cong has been devastated by these lumering World War II cargo planes, loaded to the gunwales with machineguns. "Spookies," the GIs call them.

Other "Spookies" and helicopters were ready for instant takeoff in case they also should be needed to rain fire down from the skies. Each pilot had a map of Pleiku divided into numbered squares. The command post could direct him swiftly to any sector merely by barking a number over the radio.

The reaction time was so swift, Col. Barnes explained, that they had been able to spot and knock out enemy rocket fire within three minutes. The Pleiku and Holloway airfields, both in the Pleiku area, had been hit repeatedly by rocket and mortar attacks.

Liquor Is Damaged

Twice, the rockets have missed Pleiku field and hit a nearby hospital. But heroic nurses hustled the patients under the beds and covered them with mattresses in time to avoid major tragedy. Only one, who panicked, was killed.

Capt. Don Henry, a slight, soft-spoken officer, declared solemnly that Holloway had received the most demoralizing blow. A Viet Cong rocket had exploded just outside the officers' club, he said, jarring the liquor off the shelves and shattering several bottles.

The night faded away without serious incident. Except for the brief shootings, the Viet Cong stayed under cover. The expected attack never developed, perhaps because they have learned that the Americans have been on their guard at Pleiku since the treacherous 1965 attack.

Note: The U. S. officers at Plueiku are unanimous in their praise of the South Vietnam soldiers who threw back the Viet Cong attacks on the principal cities in this area during the infamous lunar new year offensive. As Col. Barnes wrote in a summary of the fighting: "In almost every case, ARVN (Army, Republic of Vietnam) bore the brunt of the fighting. Their performance was excellent. In the instances that RF/PF forces (local militia) were involved, the RF/PF did an outstanding job."

Charges Secret Deal

$40 Million for Mao-Kremlin

By LEON DENNEN
NEA Foreign News Analyst

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (NEA) — According to Radio Moscow, the United States offered to pay Red China $40 million "for the various services required to aid American soldiers" in their aggression against Vietnam.

Vague claims of secret cooperation between Washington and Peking had been made by Moscow in the past. They were ignored by the U.S. State Department as the usual Soviet propaganda aimed at discrediting Red China.

However, this time Russia's charges of secret negotiations between the United States and China are anything but vague. It would be a serious error for the Johnson administration to pass them over in silence.

Moscow claims that the American offer of $40 million was made by Ambassador John Gronouski during the last periodic meeting between U.S. and Chinese diplomats in Warsaw, Poland.

Peking's services to the American soldiers would be given in Hong Kong, Radio Moscow said. They would include "the use of Chinese barges, water and fuel for U.S. ships, and food and alcoholic beverages for U.S. troops."

If the Russians are to be believed, Red China's envoy at the Warsaw meeting, Chen Tung, reacted favorably to Gronouski's offer.

"Some aspects of the recent meeting of American and Chinese diplomats have become known in Asia," Radio Moscow said in an English broadcast to China. "Although the 134th meeting was also shrouded in secrecy, the news that did leak out was surprising and alarming."

It was alarming because "it suits Washington that Mao Tse-tung's group is ready to make money on the American ventures in Vietnam," the Russians said.

"Thus Peking pseudo-revolutionary phrases about the struggle against imperialism actually turn into direct support of United States aggression against the Vietnamese people."

Is this another figment of Moscow's imagination? Stronger deals had been made in the history of secret diplomacy. But there is hardly any doubt that Russia's renewed attack on Mao as a "stooge" of American imperialism coincided with the convocation of the international conference of Communist parties in Budapest, Hungary.

It seems that at this stage the Kremlin leaders need, above everything else, an international conference to prove to the world (and, one suspects, even more so to themselves) that they are still the leaders of the international Communist movement.

But Mao is violently against any type of Red unity sponsored by the Russians. He employed every Marxist-Leninist trick to throw a monkey wrench into the Budapest conference.

The Soviet Union's "revisist leaders, in the way they exploit the Russian workers and peasants, "are no different than the czars," said Liberation Army Daily, Red China's official army newspaper. "The hideous crimes of the new czars in the Soviet Union can never be covered up."

Liberation Army Daily also warned that the Russian people will rise up in a "revolutionary storm more violent than (Lenin's) October Revolution."

The Russians, obviously in retaliation, used the strongest language in the Kremlin's propaganda arsenal. They accused the Chinese of cooperating secretly with the United States against North Vietnam and the Viet Cong.

Soviet Avidly Hunts Signs Of U.S. Isolationist Trends

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) — State Department and Pentagon strategists are worried by growing signs that Soviet leaders believe the United states will gradually cut its foreign commitments and move toward isolationist policy after the Vietnam war.

These strategists fear this Kremlin belief will lead to strong Soviet probes into Asian, African and Mideast soft spots in the years ahead. Thus far they've found no way to convince the Russian rulers that their prediction of U. S. isolationist trends is wrong.

Britain has been reducing its overseas forces for some years. France has withdrawn even more rapidly. West Germany, Japan and other once-strong powers have shown no signs of taking on substantial military or political obligations in Vietnam or other overseas areas. The North Atlantic, Southeast Asia and Middle East Treaty Organizations are steadily growing weaker.

This post-World War II withdrawal has left a vacuum which Soviet leaders seem determined to fill.

The men in the Kremlin now apparently see signs that a considerable number of prominent Americans have begun to question strongly the wisdom of widespread U. S. foreign commitments. This movement has been especially noticeable in the U. S. Senate.

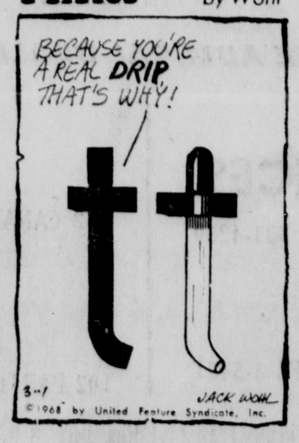

In part, these moves toward isolation are a reaction to the feeling of futility that comes over some senators when they think about Vietnam.

Heightening their reaction is the cynicism generated by the unwillingness of countries the United States has defended in two World Wars and rescued economically at heavy cost through the Marshall Plan to come to American aid either in Vietnam or in the gold-drain crisis.

There is reason to believe that Soviet leaders believe the U. S. isolation will reflect itself in a greater U. S. reluctance to get mixed up in future Vietnams, Koreas and Mideast wars. The Soviet thinking apparently is that the United States will step in more gingerly or not at all. Therefore the Soviet Union will be able to move with greater freedom in subverting governments and in expanding its spheres of influence.

The thinking here, nevertheless, is that the Soviet leaders will move cautiously. They will not be certain their conclusions are correct. They will be prepared to draw back if the United States reacts strongly. American analysts interviewed see no indications the Soviet Union wants a showdown with the United States that could lead to nuclear war.

Idea Oversold That College Education Is Key to Success

By JOHN BECKLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dream of a college education for all young Americans, so dear to the hearts of parents and politicians, is being called into serious question on Capitol Hill.

The charge has been made in Congress that the four of every five American youths who now fail to complete college are victims of a natural obsession with the goal of a college education for everyone.

Even in the academic world itself it has been argued that educators have oversold the idea of a college education as the key to success.

A better goal for a national education policy, said these critics, is some sort of vocational education for all — some preparation for choosing, and holding a decent job. A college education may be a good way for some to get such preparation, they say it's not the only way.

Yet in a nation where only one youth in five graduates from college, the federal government contributes nearly three times as much money to support higher education lege degree have never learned a marketable skill.

The bitter fruits of this policy, he says, are staggering rates of unemployment among young people and the $1 billion a year the government spends on work-training programs to rehabilitate them.

The framework for a national policy of universal vocational education has been prepared by a special advisory council appointed by John W. Gardner, secretary of health, education and welfare.

It suggests occupational preparation begin in elementary school with "a realistic picture of the world of work". In junior high school, it says, all students study the economic and industrial system to become acquainted with the range of job choices available.

Specific job training should be given in high school to all students not planning to go to college. And two years of than vocational education. And the total has remained fairly level for three years in vocational education while rising repidly for higher education.

Rep. Albert H. Quie, R-Minn., one of the strongest advocates of better vocational education, estimates 90 per cent of those who come into the job market without a col-post-secondary school training in advanced skills should be offered free as part of the education system.

The council recommends that meanwhile, existing programs should be greatly expanded and federal expenditures icreased from the present $250 million a year to $1.5 billion.

The administration has accepted some of these proposed remedies but its response to the suggested increase in spending was to ask or another $15 million to fund pilot programs in the states.

Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, D-Ill., presiding over current hearings on the administration request, bluntly told the witnesses it was not enough. "This is just a start," he said. "The goal must be legislation which provides an education for meaningful work and full employability."

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, MARCH 1, 1968

Rockefeller's Position

Governor Romney's withdrawal from the 1968 Presidential race has given moderate leaders in the Republican Party including GOP governors, who say they favor Governor Rockefeller, the focus for their energies. The business of trying to get the nomination for Rockefeller now should get underway full steam with serious moves by the moderates.

Governor Rockefeller's recent statement that he would run if the convention nominated him gives the governors and other moderate leaders the nod to continue their efforts for his candidacy. So the battle lines are drawn and the pro-Rockefeller moderates don't have to wait for the big push. It was felt by many that delay and inactivity would hurt him against the surging drive for Nixon.

David Lawrence in his dispatch in an adjoining column mentions three barriers to Rockefeller's nomination: Failure to support Senator Goldwater in 1964; his position on the side of labor unions in the recent New York City garbage strike; his divorce and remarriage.

Although his divorce is a personal matter, many women voters are against his nomination because of it. As we previously pointed out, with a vote potential of four million more than men, the women's vote can be decisive in the national election this fall. Nixon already has set out to capture it.

Rockefeller has been silent on one of the most important matters confronting the nation — the Vietnam war. Before they openly and actively start campaigning, his supporters should know just how his policies differ, if they do, from the Johnson administration.

While the aspirants struggle for the nomination, Ray C. Bliss, national committee chairman, will be shaping the campaign to help the nominee win the election. An essential part of this campaign is to capture an increased share of the so-called minority vote — the Negro, Jewish, Polish, Italian, labor and other groups. Without them, the electoral votes of the major cities which control the 10 big states cannot be won.

For instance, in 1966 the Republican party secured 19 per cent of the Negro vote, up from 7 per cent in 1964; under Clarence Lee Towns Jr., special assistant, the goal for 1968 is 35 per cent. Only about 12 per cent of the Jewish vote normally goes Republican; Bernard Katze, New York lawyer, will try to improve this vote. The labor leaders publicly support President Johnson, but the rank and file lean toward the Republicans and will be actively sought to vote for the party.

"We know we're not going to win a majority of any of these ethnic or nationality groups," Bliss said, "but we've got to get our share of this vote, or we're in trouble."

Automobile Insurance

Should damage suits in automobile accidents be abolished? The American Bar Association will make a major study of this question in the coming year. This decision came after lawyers concerned with the growing backlog of automobile accident cases threatened to fight a proposal upholding the present system of negligence suits.

Massachusetts, the first state to make compulsory automobile liability insurance a requisite for registering an automobile—New York also has such a law—is considering a bill that would compensate all auto accident victims, regardless of which driver was at fault. The law passed the House of Representatives easily last year but was turned back by the Senate.

Authors of the bill assert that a reduction in administrative cost as a result of eliminating lawsuits for lesser accidents would bring substantial savings in premiums. Opponents say the bill would produce double the number of claims, with both drivers in an accident claiming damages.

In many parts of the country, negligence suits for automobile accidents damages have mounted beyond the capability of the court system to handle them. Damage awards have also mounted so high that insurance rates have become a large part of the cost of owning a car.

The ABA study will be welcomed if it can solve this question. If it becomes mired in the argument between negligence lawyers and insurance lawyers, the public interest would be lost, and a bad situation will get worse.

Last March, a Federal court issued an order for the schools of Alabama to desegregate, except for the capital, Montgomery. Now, Montgomery has been ordered to desegregate its dual school system and faculties by next fall. The Federal courts are moving inexorably to complete nationwide desegregation.

When about 75 students and faculty members walked out on Vice President Humphrey at American University, Washington, he pointed out: "No freedom of speech for reactionaries, socialists, warmongers, peaceniks, soon becomes no freedom of speech for anyone." Extremists never realize this when they walk out on speakers they disapprove.

Who Says They Learn From History?

David Lawrence Says

Battle Lines Are Drawn For Nixon-Rockefeller

WASHINGTON — The lines now have been drawn for a contest between former Vice President Nixon and Governor Rockefeller of New York for the Republican nomination for the presidency.

For a long time it has been conjectured in political circles that Governor Romney's preconvention campaign was made possible largely by the help of Governor Rockefeller. The Michigan governor may have pictured a Rockefeller-Romney ticket. Mr. Romney himself publicly acknowledged the aid which his campaign received from Mr. Rockefeller.

The strange vicissitudes of preconvention campaigning, however, all but eliminated Gov. Romney several weeks ago when he said he had been "brainwashed" while he was being briefed by American officials in Vietnam. This political blunder weakened his position with many Republican leaders. They felt that, while Mr. Romney was frank and outspoken, he was not politically sophisticated or he would not have used this terminology.

Governor Rockefeller has for many months now said he is not a candidate, but the pressure to nominate him has been continuing among his friends and supporters. Their theory has been that, if a sufficient demand arose, he would accede to it. It was not surprising, therefore, when a few days ago the New York governor said publicly that, while he did not expect to be "drafted," he would run if the convention nominated him.

In politics this is tantamount to launching of his candidacy. The mere fact that there has been an effort in the New Hampshire primary, which is to be held on March 12, to have Gov. Rockefeller's name written in on the ballot — though without his consent — has given rise to widespread speculation that the Rockefeller candidacy could no longer be regarded as inactive or passive. Likewise, the timing of the Romney announcement of withdrawal, to be made this week while 45 of the nation's governors are here for a conference, is in itself significant. For many of the Republican governors favor Rockefeller for the presidential nomination.

There are many barriers, on the other hand, to the nomination of Governor Rockefeller. He antagonized a lot of the Republican rank and file when he failed to support Senator Barry Goldwater as the Republican nominee in 1964. He has never repudiated that action, though he has said publicly that he will support the presidential nominee of the Republican party this time whoever he happens to be.

Another barrier is the position of Governor Rockefeller recently in New York City's garbage strike. He took the side of the labor unions in opposition to the stand of Mayor John Lindsay, a fellow Republican. This did considerable harm to Rockefeller's prospects, as many businessmen throughout the country were alienated. They are not likely to be enthusiastic about any Republican nominee who assumes a pro-labor attitude.

There is still another handicap from which Governor Rockefeller suffers. Immaterial as it may be to drag into the campaign the fact that he was divorced and later remarried—as this is a personal matter and really has nothing to do with the choice of a presidential candidate — Republican politicians say that women voters in many partes of the country have expressed themselves emphatically against the nomination of Rockefeller. Any substantial loss of the Republican women's vote would, of course, be a serious factor on Election Day next November. Indeed, some of the Republican leaders say that they have been told by many voters that they would rather have President and Mrs. Johnson continue in the White House than see Governor and Mrs. Rockefeller move in there.

The candidacy of the New York governor, however, will undoubtedly be pressed by his supporters. Coincidentally, the Republican leaders who control many state delegations and want to see former vice president Nixon nominated will intensify their effort to build up a wide margin of delegate strength.

The biggest single advantage on Mr. Nixon's side is that he was vice president of the United States for eight years with President Eisenhower. The general might even campaign for the man who was his close associate during two presidential terms.

South Vietnamese Cooperated With U.S. Command at Pleiku

(Editor's Note: Jack Anderson today continues his spot news reporting from the Vietnam war front.)

PLEIKU — An intelligence report warned that the Viet Cong were bunching for an attack on Pleiku, and I flew up from Saigon to see exactly how the VC operated in thir recent daredevil strategy. By the time I arrived, Col. John W. Barnes of Washington, D. C., had already ordered an alert.

Pleiku was where the war escalated. It was in response to a sneak attack on the American barracks here that President Johnson on Feb. 7, 1965, first ordered the bombing of North Vietnam.

Today, many strategists regard Pleiku as the key to control of South Vietnam. For this is the main bastion in the central highlands — the Annamitique Mountains — which form the backbone of South Vietnam and dominate the country.

The best place to watch developments, as the Viet Cong maneuvered in the night, was inside the joint U. S.-Vietnamese command post, a three-room beehive crackling with radio signals. Huge wall maps speckled with red and blue triangles and circles, pinpointed the location of our observation posts and ambush patrols. Ominous red dots showed where Viet Cong had been reported.

Capt. Brian McEnay of Dunedin, Fla., the duty officer jotted more red dots on the operational map around the village of Plei Yan, six miles northwest of the city. Word had been received from Vietnamese agents that livestock, not belonging to the village, had been spotted. It was assumed that the Viet Cong probably were using the animals to carry heavy rocket launchers.

A hot line, manned by Vietnamese, squawked raucously. It was another report on the livestock. Orders went out to the artillery units to fire H and I (harrasment and interdiction) rounds at random around the village.

Capt. McEnany scribbled in the logbook: "1900. Village of Plei Yan has much livestock in village. Sector reports this as unusual. H & I commences around the village."

'Illumination Requested'

An hour later, the other hot line jangled. This one, manned by Americans, had a more conventional ring. A helicopter pilot reported that the Viet Cong had opened fire on him a few miles southeast of the city. This coincided with a report from a prisoner that a Viet Cong unit had moved into this area with mortars.

McEnany circled the area on the map and marked "AW" (automatic weapons) in the center of the circle. He recorded in the logbook: "2005. Hel. took AW fire."

He had scarcely completed the entry when the Vietnamese hot line squawked again urgently, followed within seconds by the more clamorous jangle of the American hot line. Observation posts 11 and 12 had spotted small-arms fire in the southwest section of Pleiku. They requested illumination.

Moments later, whomp! whomp! whomp! Three flares were fired by an artillery unit only a few hundred yards away.

A C-47 Dragonship, circling overhead like an eagle watching for prey, also swung over the area. Many a nest of Viet Cong has been devastated by these lumering World War II cargo planes, loaded to the gunwales with machineguns. "Spookies," the GIs call them.

Other "Spookies" and helicopters were ready for instant takeoff in case they also should be needed to rain fire down from the skies. Each pilot had a map of Pleiku divided into numbered squares. The command post could direct him swiftly to any sector merely by barking a number over the radio.

The reaction time was so swift, Col. Barnes explained, that they had been able to spot and knock out enemy rocket fire within three minutes. The Pleiku and Holloway airfields, both in the Pleiku area, had been hit repeatedly by rocket and mortar attacks.

Liquor Is Damaged

Twice, the rockets have missed Pleiku field and hit a nearby hospital. But heroic nurses hustled the patients under the beds and covered them with mattresses in time to avoid major tragedy. Only one, who panicked, was killed.

Capt. Don Henry, a slight, soft-spoken officer, declared solemnly that Holloway had received the most demoralizing blow. A Viet Cong rocket had exploded just outside the officers' club, he said, jarring the liquor off the shelves and shattering several bottles.

The night faded away without serious incident. Except for the brief shootings, the Viet Cong stayed under cover. The expected attack never developed, perhaps because they have learned that the Americans have been on their guard at Pleiku since the treacherous 1965 attack.

Note: The U. S. officers at Plueiku are unanimous in their praise of the South Vietnam soldiers who threw back the Viet Cong attacks on the principal cities in this area during the infamous lunar new year offensive. As Col. Barnes wrote in a summary of the fighting: "In almost every case, ARVN (Army, Republic of Vietnam) bore the brunt of the fighting. Their performance was excellent. In the instances that RF/PF forces (local militia) were involved, the RF/PF did an outstanding job."

Charges Secret Deal

$40 Million for Mao-Kremlin

By LEON DENNEN
NEA Foreign News Analyst

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (NEA) — According to Radio Moscow, the United States offered to pay Red China $40 million "for the various services required to aid American soldiers" in their aggression against Vietnam.

Vague claims of secret cooperation between Washington and Peking had been made by Moscow in the past. They were ignored by the U.S. State Department as the usual Soviet propaganda aimed at discrediting Red China.

However, this time Russia's charges of secret negotiations between the United States and China are anything but vague. It would be a serious error for the Johnson administration to pass them over in silence.

Moscow claims that the American offer of $40 million was made by Ambassador John Gronouski during the last periodic meeting between U.S. and Chinese diplomats in Warsaw, Poland.

Peking's services to the American soldiers would be given in Hong Kong, Radio Moscow said. They would include "the use of Chinese barges, water and fuel for U.S. ships, and food and alcoholic beverages for U.S. troops."

If the Russians are to be believed, Red China's envoy at the Warsaw meeting, Chen Tung, reacted favorably to Gronouski's offer.

"Some aspects of the recent meeting of American and Chinese diplomats have become known in Asia," Radio Moscow said in an English broadcast to China. "Although the 134th meeting was also shrouded in secrecy, the news that did leak out was surprising and alarming."

It was alarming because "it suits Washington that Mao Tse-tung's group is ready to make money on the American ventures in Vietnam," the Russians said.

"Thus Peking pseudo-revolutionary phrases about the struggle against imperialism actually turn into direct support of United States aggression against the Vietnamese people."

Is this another figment of Moscow's imagination? Stronger deals had been made in the history of secret diplomacy. But there is hardly any doubt that Russia's renewed attack on Mao as a "stooge" of American imperialism coincided with the convocation of the international conference of Communist parties in Budapest, Hungary.

It seems that at this stage the Kremlin leaders need, above everything else, an international conference to prove to the world (and, one suspects, even more so to themselves) that they are still the leaders of the international Communist movement.

But Mao is violently against any type of Red unity sponsored by the Russians. He employed every Marxist-Leninist trick to throw a monkey wrench into the Budapest conference.

The Soviet Union's "revisist leaders, in the way they exploit the Russian workers and peasants, "are no different than the czars," said Liberation Army Daily, Red China's official army newspaper. "The hideous crimes of the new czars in the Soviet Union can never be covered up."

Liberation Army Daily also warned that the Russian people will rise up in a "revolutionary storm more violent than (Lenin's) October Revolution."

The Russians, obviously in retaliation, used the strongest language in the Kremlin's propaganda arsenal. They accused the Chinese of cooperating secretly with the United States against North Vietnam and the Viet Cong.

Soviet Avidly Hunts Signs Of U.S. Isolationist Trends

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) — State Department and Pentagon strategists are worried by growing signs that Soviet leaders believe the United states will gradually cut its foreign commitments and move toward isolationist policy after the Vietnam war.

These strategists fear this Kremlin belief will lead to strong Soviet probes into Asian, African and Mideast soft spots in the years ahead. Thus far they've found no way to convince the Russian rulers that their prediction of U. S. isolationist trends is wrong.

Britain has been reducing its overseas forces for some years. France has withdrawn even more rapidly. West Germany, Japan and other once-strong powers have shown no signs of taking on substantial military or political obligations in Vietnam or other overseas areas. The North Atlantic, Southeast Asia and Middle East Treaty Organizations are steadily growing weaker.

This post-World War II withdrawal has left a vacuum which Soviet leaders seem determined to fill.

The men in the Kremlin now apparently see signs that a considerable number of prominent Americans have begun to question strongly the wisdom of widespread U. S. foreign commitments. This movement has been especially noticeable in the U. S. Senate.

In part, these moves toward isolation are a reaction to the feeling of futility that comes over some senators when they think about Vietnam.

Heightening their reaction is the cynicism generated by the unwillingness of countries the United States has defended in two World Wars and rescued economically at heavy cost through the Marshall Plan to come to American aid either in Vietnam or in the gold-drain crisis.

There is reason to believe that Soviet leaders believe the U. S. isolation will reflect itself in a greater U. S. reluctance to get mixed up in future Vietnams, Koreas and Mideast wars. The Soviet thinking apparently is that the United States will step in more gingerly or not at all. Therefore the Soviet Union will be able to move with greater freedom in subverting governments and in expanding its spheres of influence.

The thinking here, nevertheless, is that the Soviet leaders will move cautiously. They will not be certain their conclusions are correct. They will be prepared to draw back if the United States reacts strongly. American analysts interviewed see no indications the Soviet Union wants a showdown with the United States that could lead to nuclear war.

Idea Oversold That College Education Is Key to Success

By JOHN BECKLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dream of a college education for all young Americans, so dear to the hearts of parents and politicians, is being called into serious question on Capitol Hill.

The charge has been made in Congress that the four of every five American youths who now fail to complete college are victims of a natural obsession with the goal of a college education for everyone.

Even in the academic world itself it has been argued that educators have oversold the idea of a college education as the key to success.

A better goal for a national education policy, said these critics, is some sort of vocational education for all — some preparation for choosing, and holding a decent job. A college education may be a good way for some to get such preparation, they say it's not the only way.

Yet in a nation where only one youth in five graduates from college, the federal government contributes nearly three times as much money to support higher education lege degree have never learned a marketable skill.

The bitter fruits of this policy, he says, are staggering rates of unemployment among young people and the $1 billion a year the government spends on work-training programs to rehabilitate them.

The framework for a national policy of universal vocational education has been prepared by a special advisory council appointed by John W. Gardner, secretary of health, education and welfare.

It suggests occupational preparation begin in elementary school with "a realistic picture of the world of work". In junior high school, it says, all students study the economic and industrial system to become acquainted with the range of job choices available.

Will Rush New Zena School Plans

By WALTER S. CLARK JR

Officials of the Kingston Consolidated School District will lose no time in preparing a second set of specifications for the proposed Zena Elemeatary School and setting a date for filing of new bids by contractors.

The Board of Education, representatives of Harry Halverson Associates, architects, Connelly & Connelly, school district attorneys, Supt. of Schools W. Wendell Hoover and Ira M. Shaw, associate superintendent for business management, will confer without delay to expedite the matter.

Appeal Sustained

Commissioner of Education Dr. James E. Allen Jr., this week sustained the appeal of William E. Forrest, Inc., Poughkeepsie contractors, in relation to adoption of plans and specifications for the construction of thet Zena school.

The Poughkeepsie firm submitted the second low bid in the previous bidding for general construction. The estimate was $823,000. Low bid was filed by Stanley R. Benjamin, Inc., of Long Beach. The amount was $819,940.

Dr. Allen ruled that "in view of the failure (of the Board of Educatoin) to comply with the requirements of General Municipal Law, Section 101, I have no alternative but set aside the specificatoins and to order the Board of Education to reject all bids and to prepare new specifications which meet the requirements of law."

The appellant, who bid on the general construction portion of the specifications for the school, alleged in the appeal, which blocked the awarding of bids in January, "certain irregularities" in connection with the plans and specifications.

The appeal involved to the most part the general construction and plumbing contracts, officials pointed out, but under the order of Dr. Allen rebidding must be carried out on all portions of the specifications including sprinkler work, kitchen work, heating and ventilating, electric work.

The appellant further contended that the plans had not been approved by the Commissioner of Education in accordance with the provisions of Section 408 of the Education Law prior to bidding, and that the plans and specifications did not conform to the provisions of other sections of that law or to sections of the Regulations of the Commissioner of Education and the General Municipal Law and Manual of Planning Standards for School Buildings promulgated by the State Education Department.

The Board of Education generally denied the relevant allegations of the petition, but admitted that the plans and specifications in question did not bear the endorsement of approval of Dr. Allen of plans for certain school buildings, does not require that such approval be obtained prior to bidding.

Provision Challenged

While the appellant questioned specifications requiring the general contractor to do trench rock excavation for mechanical prime contractors, the commissioner noted, however, the record contained no basis for a finding that the inclusion of this excavation work in the general contract violated the provision of such section.

The appellant, among other things, challenged a provision of the specifications requiring the general contractor to agree to coordinate his work with that of the other contractors.

Commissioner Allen, however, noted that while the imposition on the general contractor of a duty of supervision of other prime contractors would violate the provisions of Section 101 of the General Municipal Law, "I do not find such intent to be evinced in the specifications before me."

The commissioner's papers added, "While not determinative of this appeal, it should be pointed out that the respondent district has inadvertently included in its specifications the form of non-collusive bidding certification required by Chapter 751 of the Laws of 1965 rather than that required by Chapter 675 of the Laws of 1966, which superseed the 1965 requirement (General Municipal Law, Section 103-d).

Technicality Puts Off Sentencing in Dunn Case

A legal technicality held up the sentencing of Donald A. Dunn, 34, of Newburgh, in county court Wednesday afternoon and imposition of sentence adjourned to March 20 at 11 a. m., pending information relating to a previous conviction.

Dunn was convicted Feb. 13 during a jury trial in county court on all counts including attempted murder, first degree; assault, second degree, two counts, and conspiracy as a felony. Dunn was charged with the attempted murder of the husband of his paramour in the Town of Plattekill March 31, 1967.

Testimony at the trial indicated that Elmer Strickland, 49, returned to his southern Ulster County home and as he entered the front door in the darkness was met by a shotgun blast, which authorities said was fired by Dunn from a 12-gauge shotgun. As Strickland turned to flee he was again fired upon and fell bleeding at the doorstep of a neighbor. Strickland's wife, Lorraine, 38, who according to testimony was having an alleged affair with the defendant, was not home at the time.

Prior to sentencing late Wednesday, District Attorney Torraca submitted to the court an information listing the previous convictions of the defendant. A heated debate ensued between the DA and defense attorney Hubert A. Richter as to the exact number of previous convictions.

Judge Mino called for a 10-minute recess to allow the court time to study the information. After the recess, agreement was reached as to the exact number of previous convictions. However, the defendant raised a question as to his conviction in Orange County March 2, 1949, on burglary and petit larceny when he told the court that to the best of his knowledge and belief, he was not represented by an attorney. Sentencing was adjourned to March 20 to permit the district attorney's office time to secure additional information on the Orange County conviction.

Dunn faced a possible life conviction under the Baume Law if the information indicated this last conviction was his fourth. Under the present circumstances he still faces a maximum prison sentence of up to 25 years.

Lions Hear Lawyer on Land Taking

Guest speaker at this week's Kingston Lions Club meeting was Louis A. Di Donna, a partner in the law firm of Saccoman and Di Donna. Di Donna has been an attorney for the past 17 years, was town attorney, Town of Ulster 1955-57 and was state assistant attorney general as trial attorney for the State of New York from 1957-59. Since 1959 he has had extensive practice representing landowners in condemnation cases.

He noted that a large number of land takings from private landowners are being made in the Ulster County area to make way for highways, schools, parks, public utilities and urban renewal.

Di Donna said the general public is almost totally unaware of the valuable services which an experienced appraiser and attorney can offer the landowner in condemnation cases.

Dr. Allen ruled that "in view of the failure (of the Board of Educatoin) to comply with the requirements of General Municipal Law, Section 101, I have no alternative but set aside the specificatoins and to order the Board of Education to reject all bids and to prepare new specifications which meet the requirements of law."

The appellant, who bid on the general construction portion of the specifications for the school, alleged in the appeal, which blocked the awarding of bids in January, "certain irregularities" in connection with the plans and specifications.

The appeal involved to the most part the general construction and plumbing contracts, officials pointed out, but under the order of Dr. Allen rebidding must be carried out on all portions of the specifications including sprinkler work, kitchen work, heating and ventilating, electric work.

The appellant further contended that the plans had not been approved by the Commissioner of Education in accordance with the provisions of Section 408 of the Education Law prior to bidding, and that the plans and specifications did not conform to the provisions of other sections of that law or to sections of the Regulations of the Commissioner of Education and the General Municipal Law and Manual of Planning Standards for School Buildings promulgated by the State Education Department.

The Board of Education generally denied the relevant allegations of the petition, but admitted that the plans and specifications in question did not bear the endorsement of approval of Dr. Allen of plans for certain school buildings, does not require that such approval be obtained prior to bidding.

Provision Challenged

While the appellant questioned specifications requiring the general contractor to do trench rock excavation for mechanical prime contractors, the commissioner noted, however, the record contained no basis for a finding that the inclusion of this excavation work in the general contract violated the provision of such section.

The appellant, among other things, challenged a provision of the specifications requiring the general contractor to agree to coordinate his work with that of the other contractors.

Commissioner Allen, however, noted that while the imposition on the general contractor of a duty of supervision of other prime contractors would violate the provisions of Section 101 of the General Municipal Law, "I do not find such intent to be evinced in the specifications before me."

The commissioner's papers added, "While not determinative of this appeal, it should be pointed out that the respondent district has inadvertently included in its specifications the form of non-collusive bidding certification required by Chapter 751 of the Laws of 1965 rather than that required by Chapter 675 of the Laws of 1966, which superseed the 1965 requirement (General Municipal Law, Section 103-d).

Technicality Puts Off Sentencing in Dunn Case

A legal technicality held up the sentencing of Donald A. Dunn, 34, of Newburgh, in county court Wednesday afternoon and imposition of sentence adjourned to March 20 at 11 a. m., pending information relating to a previous conviction.

Dunn was convicted Feb. 13 during a jury trial in county court on all counts including attempted murder, first degree; assault, second degree, two counts, and conspiracy as a felony. Dunn was charged with the attempted murder of the husband of his paramour in the Town of Plattekill March 31, 1967.

Testimony at the trial indicated that Elmer Strickland, 49, returned to his southern Ulster County home and as he entered the front door in the darkness was met by a shotgun blast, which authorities said was fired by Dunn from a 12-gauge shotgun. As Strickland turned to flee he was again fired upon and fell bleeding at the doorstep of a neighbor. Strickland's wife, Lorraine, 38, who according to testimony was having an alleged affair with the defendant, was not home at the time.

Prior to sentencing late Wednesday, District Attorney Torraca submitted to the court an information listing the previous convictions of the defendant. A heated debate ensued between the DA and defense attorney Hubert A. Richter as to the exact number of previous convictions.

Judge Mino called for a 10-minute recess to allow the court time to study the information. After the recess, agreement was reached as to the exact number of previous convictions. However, the defendant raised a question as to his conviction in Orange County March 2, 1949, on burglary and petit larceny when he told the court that to the best of his knowledge and belief, he was not represented by an attorney. Sentencing was adjourned to March 20 to permit the district attorney's office time to secure additional information on the Orange County conviction.

Dunn faced a possible life conviction under the Baume Law if the information indicated this last conviction was his fourth. Under the present circumstances he still faces a maximum prison sentence of up to 25 years.

Lions Hear Lawyer on Land Taking

Guest speaker at this week's Kingston Lions Club meeting was Louis A. Di Donna, a partner in the law firm of Saccoman and Di Donna. Di Donna has been an attorney for the past 17 years, was town attorney, Town of Ulster 1955-57 and was state assistant attorney general as trial attorney for the State of New York from 1957-59. Since 1959 he has had extensive practice representing landowners in condemnation cases.

He noted that a large number of land takings from private landowners are being made in the Ulster County area to make way for highways, schools, parks, public utilities and urban renewal.

Di Donna said the general public is almost totally unaware of the valuable services which an experienced appraiser and attorney can offer the landowner in condemnation cases.

Two-Man Race Claims Nixon

LEBANON, N.H. (AP) — With Gov. George Romney out of the New Hampshire presidential primary, Richard M. Nixon is endeavoring to depict the election as a contest between himself and President Johnson.

Nixon closed a speech to a large audience in Lebanon by saying:

"Go forth from this room and show that New Hampshire says that it's time for Lyndon Johnson to go back to Texas and that as New Hampshire goes, so goes the nation."

The audience exploded with applause.

Earlier, Nixon referred indirectly to Romney's withdrawal by saying, "Your votes still matter." He told the crowd, "The voters of the nation will be looking to New Hampshire, and the size of the vote on the Republican side will be measured against the size of the vote on the Democratic side."

Nixon told a reporter after the speech, "To a certain extent, considering the registration, the New Hampshire primary can be considered an approval or disapproval of the Johnson administration."

Official 1966 New Hampshire registration figures showed 145,694 Republicans; 122,422 Independents, and 87,490 Democrats.

The former vice president has said several times that he believes a "new coalition" is forming across the United States in which Democrats and Independents are joining Republicans.

Nixon returned to the theme of a Nixon-Johnson contest in an interview with a radio station in nearby Hanover, the site of Dartmouth College. He reminded the station's listeners that he carried New Hampshire in 1960 and that Johnson won the state in 1964. Then he said:

"In 1968, it will be very interesting to see whether Nixon or Johnson gets the bigger vote, Johnson running against Sen. (Eugene) McCarthy, who will not, I think, make too significant a showing. And my running against Gov. (Nelson) Rockefeller, assuming his write-in does materialize."

A group of Rockefeller's supporters have banded together to get the New York governor a write-in vote in the March 12 primary in New Hampshire. Nixon has estimated that it may amount to 20 to 25 per cent of the total GOP vote in the presidential preference side of the ballot.

Nixon said he is not "issuing a challenge" to Rockefeller to oppose him in the six presidential primaries which he already has entered. But all the indications are that he would prefer to have an opponent in these contests. His objective is to prove that he can win in November, to destroy the "loser image" stemming from his defeats for the presidency in 1960 and his failure to win the California gubernatorial election in 1962.

The 'Money Bag' Case Marked Ready for Trial

The case of Emerson "Tookie" DuBois, 19, Broadway, city, charged with robbery and grand larceny in connection with the theft of a money bag containing $960 on December 30, was marked ready for trial Wednesday by County Judge Raymond J. Mino.

The indictment covering robbery, third degree and grand larceny, third, charges DuBois in the robbery of Mrs. George Bixby of Woodstock an employe of Nugent's Dress Shop at Kingston Shopping Plaza. Kingston police said a man wearing a ski mask pushed Mrs. Bixby to the ground and grabbed the store's money bag before Mrs. Bixby could deposit the cash in the bank. DuBois is represented by Michael Bruhn assigned by the court.

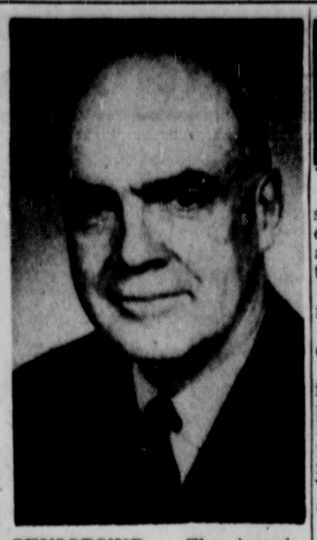

Also marked ready was the case of Rodney Taylor, 18 of Rosendale charged in the indictment with knowingly and unlawfully possessing amphetamine and bartering, exchanging, selling and giving or offering to give a stimulant drug to another.

Taylor, represented by Michael Cooper, assigned by the court, was arrested during last summer when he allegedly was involved in a street altercation with another and later, according to city police resisted arrest when brought to city jail.

Another marked ready for trial was the case of Edward Jackson, 35 of New York City, charged with burglary, third degree; grand larceny, third degree and obscenity. The arrest resulted from the theft of property valued at $339 taken from an employe of the Granit Hotel, Accord. Troopers charged that Jackson entered the room of his fellow employe, Pablo Vasquez. Marshall Lipton is counsel of record.

Also marked ready was the case of David Duane Myers charged with burglary, third degree; unlawful entry and petit larceny. G. Jacobowitz is counsel for the defendant.

The district attorney's office was represented by James Fisher and Albert Lonstein.

CENSORSHIP — The American military command made it official—it will no longer tolerate detailed on-the-scene news reporting on Viet Cong shelling of U.S. bases. Brig. Gen. Winant Sidle, the top U.S. spokesman for Gen. William C. Westmoreland, outlined for newsmen the new censorship restrictions on previously unrestricted information. for older students who want to attend college and greater federal support for adult basic education.

—Reform of the welfare system to set "uniform national standards of assistance at least as high as the annual 'poverty level' of income—now $3,335 for an urban family of four

—Development of a "national system of income supplementation" to provide "those who can work or who do work any necessary supplements in such a way as to develop incentives for fuller employment" and to give those who cannot work "a minimum standard of decent living." This is somewhat similar to previous proposals for a guaranteed annual income.

—Require the federal government to pay 90 per cent of total welfare costs, eliminate residence requirements for welfare payments, lift the current freeze on aid to dependent children, and knock out the controversial "man in the house" rule designed to curb illegitimate births among mothers on welfare.

Seeks Housing Law

—Enactment of a federal open-housing law covering sale or rental of all housing—including single-family homes—and the placement of more low-income housing outside slum areas.

—Steps to "bring within the reach of low and moderate income families within the next five years six million new and exciting units of decent housing, beginning with 600,000 units in the next year."

—Expansion of rent supplements, model-cities, urban-renewal and public-housing programs, plus enactment of an "ownership supplement program" to help low-income families buy homes.

The commission reported little has been done since last summer to remove riot causes. "In several cities," it said, "the principal official response has been to train and equip the police with more sophisticated weapons."

"... The commission condemns moves to equip police departments with mass destruction weapons, such as automatic rifles, machine guns and tanks. Weapons which are designed to destroy, not to control, have no place in densely populated urban communities."

More Negro policemen should be recruited, it said. And it proposed that slum youngsters aged 17 and 21 be hired by cities as "community service officers" with the federal government paying 90 per cent of their salaries.

This would help ease "the abrasive relationship between police and the ghetto community" which the commission described as "a major—and explosive—source of grievance, tension and disorder."

In future disorders, it said, authorities should immediately muster maximum police manpower and send it into troubled areas under the command of seasoned officers.

Vehicle Overturns

An Indiana truck driver narrowly escaped serious injury at 4:45 p. m. Thursday when the 1968 tractor-trailer he was operating went out of control and overturned off Route 44-55 at the Highland approach to the Mid-Hudson Bridge.

Robert M. Cooper, 34, of Indianapolis, was treated at Vassar Hospital for scalp lacerations and released. Trooper C. J. Bebensee investigated and reported Cooper said the vehicle started to jack-knife as he was traveling east and it went off the south shoulder and over-

Trying for Quick Double Always Dubious Practice

Q—My husband and I are in our early 30s with three small children. We have two mutual funds, Oppenheimer and Fundamental Investors. We are adding to these for our children's education. We have $4,000 in the bank, half of which we would like to invest with the hope of doubling our money in a year or two to make a down payment on a house. What is your advice?—G. A.

A—I advise you most sincerely to abandon the idea of putting money into stocks to try to double it in a year or two. We have had a big rise in share prices since October, 1966, and prospects for doubling your money in a short time—always a dubious procedure—are at present downright unlikely. Some very good stocks—including Holiday Inns and Walgreen—have more than doubled over the past 12 months, but further gains from present high levels seem likely to slow down.

If you require your money in a year or two, leave it in the bank where it will be safe from any decline. If you want to invest on a five-year basis and are willing to ride through any decline during that period, I believe that the two stocks mintioned above have excellent growth possibilities and might help you to reach your goal—but not in one or two years, in my opinion.

Q—We own Wellington Fund, Dreyfus Fund and Television & Electronics. Our agent suggests that for a fee of $5 we should transfer our holdings of Wellington into either Windsor or Ivest. I.S.

A—My answer must depend upon your objective and your circumstances. Wellington is a balanced fund which is good but rather conservative from a growth standpoint. Windsor is good but has had a rather moderate performance record. If you want a fast-action stock and are willing to accept the risks involved in this type of security, I suggest Ivest which has compiled an impressive record.

Two-Man Race Claims Nixon

LEBANON, N.H. (AP) — With Gov. George Romney out of the New Hampshire presidential primary, Richard M. Nixon is endeavoring to depict the election as a contest between himself and President Johnson.

Nixon closed a speech to a large audience in Lebanon by saying:

"Go forth from this room and show that New Hampshire says that it's time for Lyndon Johnson to go back to Texas and that as New Hampshire goes, so goes the nation."

The audience exploded with applause.

Earlier, Nixon referred indirectly to Romney's withdrawal by saying, "Your votes still matter." He told the crowd, "The voters of the nation will be looking to New Hampshire, and the size of the vote on the Republican side will be measured against the size of the vote on the Democratic side."

Nixon told a reporter after the speech, "To a certain extent, considering the registration, the New Hampshire primary can be considered an approval or disapproval of the Johnson administration."

Official 1966 New Hampshire registration figures showed 145,694 Republicans; 122,422 Independents, and 87,490 Democrats.

The former vice president has said several times that he believes a "new coalition" is forming across the United States in which Democrats and Independents are joining Republicans.

Nixon returned to the theme of a Nixon-Johnson contest in an interview with a radio station in nearby Hanover, the site of Dartmouth College. He reminded the station's listeners that he carried New Hampshire in 1960 and that Johnson won the state in 1964. Then he said:

"In 1968, it will be very interesting to see whether Nixon or Johnson gets the bigger vote, Johnson running against Sen. (Eugene) McCarthy, who will not, I think, make too significant a showing. And my running against Gov. (Nelson) Rockefeller, assuming his write-in does materialize."

A group of Rockefeller's supporters have banded together to get the New York governor a write-in vote in the March 12 primary in New Hampshire. Nixon has estimated that it may amount to 20 to 25 per cent of the total GOP vote in the presidential preference side of the ballot.

Nixon said he is not "issuing a challenge" to Rockefeller to oppose him in the six presidential primaries which he already has entered. But all the indications are that he would prefer to have an opponent in these contests. His objective is to prove that he can win in November, to destroy the "loser image" stemming from his defeats for the presidency in 1960 and his failure to win the California gubernatorial election in 1962.

The 'Money Bag' Case Marked Ready for Trial

The case of Emerson "Tookie" DuBois, 19, Broadway, city, charged with robbery and grand larceny in connection with the theft of a money bag containing $960 on December 30, was marked ready for trial Wednesday by County Judge Raymond J. Mino.

The indictment covering robbery, third degree and grand larceny, third, charges DuBois in the robbery of Mrs. George Bixby of Woodstock an employe of Nugent's Dress Shop at Kingston Shopping Plaza. Kingston police said a man wearing a ski mask pushed Mrs. Bixby to the ground and grabbed the store's money bag before Mrs. Bixby could deposit the cash in the bank. DuBois is represented by Michael Bruhn assigned by the court.

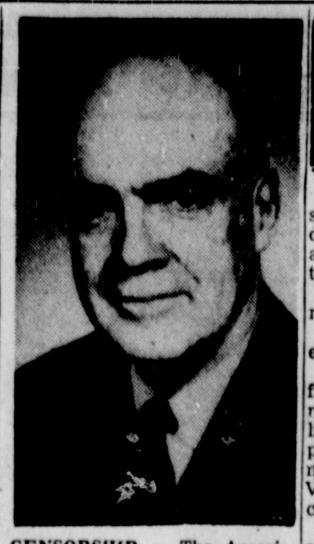

Also marked ready was the case of Rodney Taylor, 18 of Rosendale charged in the indictment with knowingly and unlawfully possessing amphetamine and bartering, exchanging, selling and giving or offering to give a stimulant drug to another.

Taylor, represented by Michael Cooper, assigned by the court, was arrested during last summer when he allegedly was involved in a street altercation with another and later, according to city police resisted arrest when brought to city jail.

Another marked ready for trial was the case of Edward Jackson, 35 of New York City, charged with burglary, third degree; grand larceny, third degree and obscenity. The arrest resulted from the theft of property valued at $339 taken from an employe of the Granit Hotel, Accord. Troopers charged that Jackson entered the room of his fellow employe, Pablo Vasquez. Marshall Lipton is counsel of record.

Also marked ready was the case of David Duane Myers charged with burglary, third degree; unlawful entry and petit larceny. G. Jacobowitz is counsel for the defendant.

The district attorney's office was represented by James Fisher and Albert Lonstein.

CENSORSHIP — The American military command made it official—it will no longer tolerate detailed on-the-scene news reporting on Viet Cong shelling of U.S. bases. Brig. Gen. Race Strife . . .

for older students who want to attend college and greater federal support for adult basic education.

—Reform of the welfare system to set "uniform national standards of assistance at least as high as the annual 'poverty level' of income—now $3,335 for an urban family of four

—Development of a "national system of income supplementation" to provide "those who can work or who do work any necessary supplements in such a way as to develop incentives for fuller employment" and to give those who cannot work "a minimum standard of decent living." This is somewhat similar to previous proposals for a guaranteed annual income.

—Require the federal government to pay 90 per cent of total welfare costs, eliminate residence requirements for welfare payments, lift the current freeze on aid to dependent children, and knock out the controversial "man in the house" rule designed to curb illegitimate births among mothers on welfare.

Seeks Housing Law

—Enactment of a federal open-housing law covering sale or rental of all housing—including single-family homes—and the placement of more low-income housing outside slum areas.

—Steps to "bring within the reach of low and moderate income families within the next five years six million new and exciting units of decent housing, beginning with 600,000 units in the next year."

—Expansion of rent supplements, model-cities, urban-renewal and public-housing programs, plus enactment of an "ownership supplement program" to help low-income families buy homes.

The commission reported little has been done since last summer to remove riot causes. "In several cities," it said, "the principal official response has been to train and equip the police with more sophisticated weapons."

"... The commission condemns moves to equip police departments with mass destruction weapons, such as automatic rifles, machine guns and tanks. Weapons which are designed to destroy, not to control, have no place in densely populated urban communities."

More Negro policemen should be recruited, it said. And it proposed that slum youngsters aged 17 and 21 be hired by cities as "community service officers" with the federal government paying 90 per cent of their salaries.

This would help ease "the abrasive relationship between police and the ghetto community" which the commission described as "a major—and explosive—source of grievance, tension and disorder."

In future disorders, it said, authorities should immediately muster maximum police manpower and send it into troubled areas under the command of seasoned officers.

Low Cost Russette

By JACK McELENEY

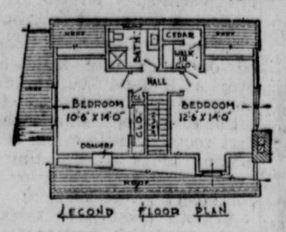

Today's feature is a pretty looking low cost cape. This house draws its appeal from cape style brought up to date with a roof overhang, bow window, modern family room and large garage.

A study of the flocr plan will show that it is very efficient and has features not found in more expensive dwellings; for example, the front entrance is foyer type, and the family room will find favor with most homemakers of today. There is a large master bedroom on the first floor and the second floor has two more bedrooms which are even larger. All have good size wardrobes.

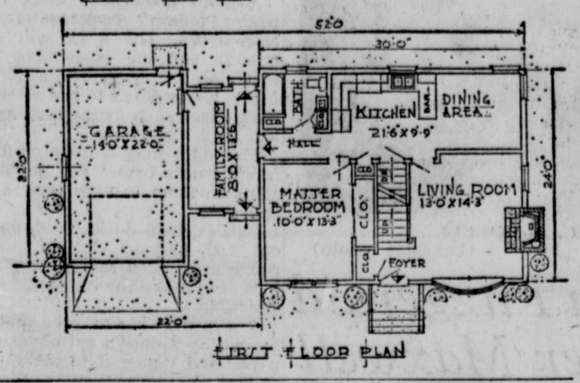

The exterior is made up of lumber yard stock windows and white cedar shingles left natural (unpainted) all around. With the trim painted either white or rust color, this house altho only 30 x 24 feet, will be a contribution to any neighborhood.

There are 720 square feet in the main living area and the overall length, including garage and family room, amounts to 52 feet.

The Green Thumb

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

VEGETABLE BOUQUET: Your shopping bag contains a lot of interesting vegetables which can be grown as indoor ornaments. For example, a carrot makes a fine vegetable bouquet. Cut a carrot in half and place the top part in an olive bottle and hang it in the window. Makes a fine plant. Or you can cut the top off and place it in a dish of pebbles and water. Top develops into a handsome "fern." Sweet potato is an excellent vine for trailing or climbing up windows. Onion bulbs (or garlic cloves) can be started in glass jars of water. Pieces can be eaten during winter and spring months. And don't forget the avocado pit. It can be started in a glass of water. Thrust toothpicks in the sides to keep it out of water. If this doesn't work, bury the seed in a pot of loose soil. Seeds of grapefruit, orange, lemon and other citrus can be started in a pot of loose soil. Plants may not bear edible fruit but you'll like the foliage effect. Does any reader have other suggestions for using vegetables in indoor "bouquets"?

STARTING TOMATOES: If you have had poor luck starting your own tomato plants, perhaps it's because of the soil mixture. Try the new Jiffy pellets. They look like a wafer, but when watered, they expand in minutes, into a cylinder nearly 2 inches across. No pot is needed, since the plastic net holds the cylinder shape of the peat moss. All you do is line up the pellets in a flat, tray, or pan, so that the edges are touching. Place the seed in, and water again if needed. Seed or seedling plant should be put in after the pellet has expanded. Seeds sprout seedlings develop into husky plants with a vigorous root system. In fact, the roots grow right through the net, and when shirt-sleeve weather comes, you plant pellet, plant and all.

EGGPLANTS ARE GOOD: Our recent note on eggplant culture and cookery brought in scads of letters from readers who sent us their favorite recipes for cooking eggplants. This makes us feel good because eggplant is an orphan in the vegetable world and should be re-discovered. You can grow good eggplants and cook tempting dishes with it. FREE: Want to know more about this vegetable? Send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope and ask for my guide, How to Grow and Cook Eggplants and Okra. You'll agree that eggplants can be as tasty as steak once you cook it right.

GREEN THUMB CLINIC: A reader writes: "We kept some seed over from last year. Is it good to plant this year?"

Answer: If you kept the seed dry and cool, chances are you'll get pretty good germination from it. Unused seed should be kept in small, air-tight jars and kept cool. Moisture is Public Enemy No. 1 when it comes to saving seed. Keep moisture out, not in, and temperature is the next thing to consider. The cooler the better. Don't worry about seed freezing. There's not enough moisture in seed to freeze.

When to Spray

Weedone type weed chemicals respond better when applied on warm spring days when dandelions begin to blossom, according to lawn and garden experts at Amchem Research Farm. If these weed killers are applied on cold days, however, your lawn weeds will die more slowly.

Light Rain Beneficial

Light rain won't hamper the effectiveness of weed-killing chemicals like Weedone. These chemicals produce their effect inside the weeds. A light rain after application of a dry formulation of Weedone chemicals is beneficial. A heavy rain, however, will reduce the effectiveness of both the dry and liquid chemical, according to lawn and garden experts at Amchem Research Farm.

Low Cost Russette

By JACK McELENEY

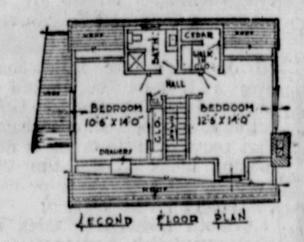

Today's feature is a pretty looking low cost cape. This house draws its appeal from cape style brought up to date with a roof overhang, bow window, modern family room and large garage.

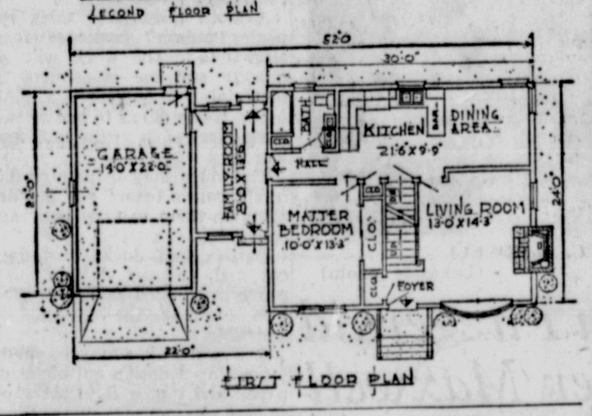

A study of the floor plan will show that it is very efficient and has features not found in more expensive dwellings; for example, the front entrance is foyer type, and the family room will find favor with most homemakers of today. There is a large master bedroom on the first floor and the second floor has two more bedrooms which are even larger. All have good size wardrobes.

The exterior is made up of lumber yard stock windows and white cedar shingles left natural (unpainted) all around. With the trim painted either white or rust color, this house altho only 30 x 24 feet, will be a contribution to any neighborhood.

There are 720 square feet in the main living area and the overall length, including garage and family room, amounts to 52 feet.

The Green Thumb

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

VEGETABLE BOUQUET: Your shopping bag contains a lot of interesting vegetables which can be grown as indoor ornaments. For example, a carrot makes a fine vegetable bouquet. Cut a carrot in half and place the top part in an olive bottle and hang it in the window. Makes a fine plant. Or you can cut the top off and place it in a dish of pebbles and water. Top develops into a handsome "fern." Sweet potato is an excellent vine for trailing or climbing up windows. Onion bulbs (or garlic cloves) can be started in glass jars of water. Pieces can be eaten during winter and spring months. And don't forget the avocado pit. It can be started in a glass of water. Thrust toothpicks in the sides to keep it out of water. If this doesn't work, bury the seed in a pot of loose soil. Seeds of grapefruit, orange, lemon and other citrus can be started in a pot of loose soil. Plants may not bear edible fruit but you'll like the foliage effect. Does any reader have other suggestions for using vegetables in indoor "bouquets"?

STARTING TOMATOES: If you have had poor luck starting your own tomato plants, perhaps it's because of the soil mixture. Try the new Jiffy pellets. They look like a wafer, but when watered, they expand in minutes, into a cylinder nearly 2 inches across. No pot is needed, since the plastic net holds the cylinder shape of the peat moss. All you do is line up the pellets in a flat, tray, or pan, so that the edges are touching. Place the seed in, and water again if needed. Seed or seedling plant should be put in after the pellet has expanded. Seeds sprout seedlings develop into husky plants with a vigorous root system. In fact, the roots grow right through the net, and when shirt-sleeve weather comes, you plant pellet, plant and all.

EGGPLANTS ARE GOOD: Our recent note on eggplant culture and cookery brought in scads of letters from readers who sent us their favorite recipes for cooking eggplants. WOMAN'S ROLE IN A CHANGING WORLD

Mankind has always lived in a changing world. But whereas the old world evolved slowly and methods, customs and attitudes were often handed down, unaltered from one generation to the next, today's world is changing all the time. The challenge which we all face is to meet these changes flexibly and to plan so that we are ready for the changes of tomorrow. We don't want change to take us unaware—we want to play our part in it and to ensure that a better world will result, not a worse one.

Woman's role in a changing world is an important one but we women sell ourselves short.

I participated in a recent seminar in New York City. It was conducted by a top national woman's organization and its more than 500 delegates represented a marvelous cross-section of professions. Yet the seminar fell short of expectations simply because too many women demonstrated a lack of confidence in their own sex.

Many of them voiced, in round table sessions, healthy contempt for politics, unions, doctors, lawyers, school systems, working conditions, crime, police brutality and taxes.

There was justified criticism of masculine prejudice toward women in many professions and undiminishing discrimination against women.

Not one solution was offered.

I voiced my opinion then as I do now, that unless women rid themselves of the "little woman" approach to life, they deserve everything they get.

I am not advocating that we become man-hating feminists driven by obsessions but we must face today's problems with realistic answers.

We are told that women have been emancipated for many years and yet they are in the minority as policy-makers. They are, more often than not, overlooked for managerial positions.

When are we, as women, going to learn that ability and training are not the prerogative of one sex alone! Take politics—why are women so content with their "old slipper" role as tea makers and fund raisers?

We need more leaders today with flexible minds, not closed ones. We need people who are honest in their dealings with each other and we desperately need to give women a greater voice in business, local and national affairs.

Let's take a hard look at our community. What about employment conditions for women, day care centers for the children of working mothers, change of emphasis in women's education, high taxation and low pay. Women's clubs and organizations should do something about these problems.

How about thrusting yourselves into the political arena? Never mind the subtle and sometimes not so subtle, suggestions that women are not tough enough for politics. They said the same thing about the working world.

And in conclusion, remember that "discrimination against women is incompatible with human dignity and with the welfare of the family and of society." That's included in the preamble to the United Nations' recently adopted declaration.

Our role is a changing world?—it's as important as we want to make it.

Groups Will Sponsor Symposium March 6

To call attention to the need for day care for children, besides that which they get at home, the Dutchess County Social Workers Club and Dutchess Community College will co-sponsor a symposium at DCC Wednesday evening, Mar. 6.

The public is invited to the presentation, which will start at 8 p.m. in the Dutchess Hall Theatre.

Mrs. Hilde Bohmer, president of the Dutchess County Social Workers Club and a consultant for Projects Head Start and Day Care programs, said that the principal speaker will be Mrs. Cornelia Goldsmith.

Mrs. Goldsmith is a consultant in early childhood education for the Office of Economic Opportunity and former chief of the Division on Day Care of the New York City Department of Health.

Other panel members will be Mrs. Phyllis Greenfield, assistant director of the Neighborhood Service Organization of Dutchess County; Ruth Wright, director of day care centers for the Dutchess County Committee for Economic Opportunity; and Mrs. Bohmer.

"We'll take up the history of day care and consider the present needs of children of all ages," Mrs. Bohmer explained.

She said that the purpose of the symposium will be to alert the general public and community leaders that there are many local children of all ages who need some sort of "supplementary care" because of the difficult circumstances under which their families exist.

"Good day care centers can provide an educational child welfare service during the hours the parents cannot provide it," she remarked.

"These facilities are urgently needed for a large number of children to prevent family stress, juvenile delinquency, future drug addiction, and other social ills," Mrs. Bohmer added.

She noted that, since the beginning of the War on Poverty, there has been an "increased interest" in the improvement of day care services.

Members of the Dutchess County Social Workers Club are all working in fields related to social welfare, she explained, and are interested in establishing new or improved services in various areas.

MRS. WALTER C. MAXWELL

Martha Jean Fitzgerald Weds Walter Maxwell

Miss Martha Jean Fitzgerald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Henry Fitzgerald of Port Ewen, exchanged marriage vows with Walter Clothier Maxwell of Kingston on Saturday, Feb. 24. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Harry McDonell Thayer of 4 Mountainview Avenue, this city, and Morris Clothier Maxwell of 438 Berkley Road, Haverford, Pa.

The ceremony took place in the Church of the Presentation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Port Ewen. The Rev. John Murphy officiated. Traditional organ music was provided by Wayne Cusher and Miss Rita Horvers was soloist. Baskets of white pompons decorated the church for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a brocade A-line gown fashioned with full length skirt, high rolled collar, short sleeves and a matching pillbox hat with a long bouffant veil of silk illusion. She carried a cluster of carnations and stephanotis on a white missal.

Miss Katherine Oest of Ulster Park was maid of honor. She wore an A-line burgundy velvet gown styled with three quarter length sleeves and a burgundy satin bow. A matching velvet Dior bow held her silk illusion veil and she carried a bouquet of white pompons and chrysanthemums.

Miss Natalie Maxwell of Colts Neck, N. Y., sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Kathleen Coughlin of Kingston, cousin of the bride, served as bridesmaids in gown and headpieces identical to that worn by the honor attendant. They carried white roses with carnations.

John Passmore of Levittown, N. Y., was best man. Ushering were MacDonell Thayer of Kingston, brother of the bridegroom; John Fitzgerald of Port Ewen, the bride's brother; Robert Johnson of Poughkeepsie and William Urkiel of New Rochelle.

A reception for 200 guests was given at The Capri 400 in Port Ewen after the church ceremony.

After the church rehearsal the night before the wedding ceremony, a dinner-dance was given at the Governer Clinton Hotel with music by Johnny Knapp. Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Thayer hosted the social event.

The bride was graduated from St. Mary's School and Kingston High School. She is a legal secretary employed by the law firm of Napoletano, Kelly and Saccoman at 243 Wall Street, Kingston.

Mr. Maxwell, an alumnus of Ellenville High School and Marist College, served four years with the U. S. Air Force. He is secretary of Hudson Westchester Radio Inc., and a member of the Kingston Lions Club. Maxwell is employed by the Hudson Valley River Commission in Tarrytown, N. Y.

For her wedding trip to Montreal, Canada, the bride wore a red and navy blue knit ensemble with navy accessories.

When Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell return from their trip, they will be at home at 176 West Chestnut Street, Garden Apartments, Kingston.

Moderns Dream Up Ways to Beat High Cost of Living

By VIVIAN BROWN

NEW YORK (AP) — Everything is going up, up, up, but, teen-age allowances remain the same, point out Cythia and Lisa, a couple of 17-year-olds who are looking for money-making ideas.

One answer to the teen-age money-making dilemma is made-by-hand items. This is an era when such efforts are appreciated. Small sketches, paintings, embroidery, decorated ceramics, are little home projects that can be worked on now and sold at vacation time.

For example, a simple project that requires little talent is decorating mugs or loaf tins that may be used as flower or herb containers in the kitchen.

A motif must have sales appeal. Potential customers can offer clues. The work will go quickly and the investment in materials will be kept to a minimum, if one sticks to one or two basic ideas such as the mug and loaf tin.

The mugs may be painted different colors before you put designs on them to vary their appearance.

Daisies, fish, ducks, bird, dog, cat and abstract designs may prove to be good sales bait. The idea is to make the little mug irresistible.

A jiffy drawing may be made by cutting a design out of newspaper and taping it to the mug so that you can make an outline. Remove the paper and fill it in. Make a striped fish, solid color duck, or a polka dot dog.

If you want to copy an unusual design, tape a cutout to the mug with carbon paper under it. Trace over it with heavy pencil to outline the pattern.

And don't be embarrassed about copying designs. Good artists copy scenes from anything—old books, calendar art, travel brochures.

A small-size metal meat loaf pan makes an ideal little herb container. Put holes in the bottom of it, paint it a pretty color that will be attractive in a kitchen and then put some feathery herb designs on it. If you want a colorful container, decorate it with a beet, tomato, carrot, peas motif. Paint a little scalloped decoration as a border around the top of the container.

If you get an early enough start you might contract with a florist to buy your entire output. The florist will fill the little pots and sink herbs or flowers into the baking tins.

The cost may be figured by estimating the number that can be made in an hour and the approximate cost of materials used during that period.

For example, say each tin costs 20 cents and paint used in an hour costs an additional 20 cents. Make 5 tins in an hour and your cost is roughly 25 cents each. You may make 50 cents on each, providing you with a tidy little profit. If you sell in bulk, your profit will no doubt be less per item, but you will be assured of larger profits in the long run.

Long-Zellmer Nuptials Told

Miss Marilyn Joan Long, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond J. Long, 185 O'Neil Street, Kingston, was married to John Edward Zellmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Zellmer, Main Street, Philmont, on Saturday, Feb. 24, at St. Joseph's Church, this city.

The Rev. James Keating officiated at the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Frank C. Sass sang traditional wedding selections, accompanied at the organ by James Sweeney. Bouquets of gladioli and pompons decorated the altar and white bows marked the family pews.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white silk organza gown styled in the cage effect over bridal taffta. The gown featured a lace yoke bodice, trimmed with clusters of tiny seed pearls, long tapered sleeves and a scalloped hemline. A detachable organza train was caught to the back lace yoke. A wide bouffant silk illusion veil was shirred to a stylized cap of lace and crystal. She carried a white pearl prayer book with a cascade of white roses.

Miss Mary Agnes Leirey, Third Avenue, Kingston, was maid of honor. She wore a floor length red velvet gown styled with long tapered sleeves and decorated with a statin bow and streamers from the back yoke. She carried an arm bouquet of long stemmed pink carnations.

Attendants were Mrs. George Taylor, Saugerties, and Mrs. Stanley Engleman, sister of the bride, Hackensack, N. J. Their gowns and flowers were fashioned identically to that of the honor attendant.

Her husband is an alumnus of Ocawamick Central High School, Claverack, and Guild School of X-Ray Technology, Saranac Lake. He is employed as chief technician, X-ray department, Ellenville.

"Wiltwyck Chapter, Kingston, New York, celebrated its 75th anniversary October 11, 1967 with an open house and tea. Organized October 11, 1892, and holding the National Society's Charter No. 26, its first regent and founder was Miss Mary Isabella Forsythe who later became the second State Regent of New York and a vice-president general.

"Unveiled at the occasion was a portrait by Ammi Phillips of Aaltie Swartwout Sleight, presented in 1907 to the chapter by Admiral Benjamin Paulding Lambertson. Restored by St. Julian Fishbourne, the painting hangs over the fireplace in the main assembly room. The subject was the daughter of General Jacobus Swartwout of the American Revolution. Born in 1773 she was the wife of John A. Sleight and died in 1839. The chapter possesses also a painting of General Swartwout.

"Wiltwyck Chapter House is one of the oldest of Kingston's many buildings of this Colonial type. Erected before 1695 and occupied during the war by the village president, Hendricus Sleight, it was damaged by the British when they burned the town October 16, 1777. Rebuilt and used by John Tappen, son of Christopher Tappen, noted patriot, to publish 'The Ulster Plebian,' it was later purchased by Wiltwyck Chapter in 1907, authentically restored and is chapter house and museum."

WOMAN'S ROLE IN A CHANGING WORLD

Mankind has always lived in a changing world. But whereas the old world evolved slowly and methods, customs and attitudes were often handed down, unaltered from one generation to the next, today's world is changing all the time. The challenge which we all face is to meet these changes flexibly and to plan so that we are ready for the changes of tomorrow. We don't want change to take us unaware—we want to play our part in it and to ensure that a better world will result, not a worse one.

Woman's role in a changing world is an important one but we women sell ourselves short.

I participated in a recent seminar in New York City. It was conducted by a top national woman's organization and its more than 500 delegates represented a marvelous cross-section of professions. Yet the seminar fell short of expectations simply because too many women demonstrated a lack of confidence in their own sex.

Many of them voiced, in round table sessions, healthy contempt for politics, unions, doctors, lawyers, school systems, working conditions, crime, police brutality and taxes.

There was justified criticism of masculine prejudice toward women in many professions and undiminishing discrimination against women.

Not one solution was offered.

I voiced my opinion then as I do now, that unless women rid themselves of the "little woman" approach to life, they deserve everything they get.

I am not advocating that we become man-hating feminists driven by obsessions but we must face today's problems with realistic answers.

We are told that women have been emancipated for many years and yet they are in the minority as policy-makers. They are, more often than not, overlooked for managerial positions.

When are we, as women, going to learn that ability and training are not the prerogative of one sex alone! Take politics—why are women so content with their "old slipper" role as tea makers and fund raisers?

We need more leaders today with flexible minds, not closed ones. We need people who are honest in their dealings with each other and we desperately need to give women a greater voice in business, local and national affairs.

Let's take a hard look at our community. What about employment conditions for women, day care centers for the children of working mothers, change of emphasis in women's education, high taxation and low pay. Women's clubs and organizations should do something about these problems.

How about thrusting yourselves into the political arena? Never mind the subtle and sometimes not so subtle, suggestions that women are not tough enough for politics. They said the same thing about the working world.

And in conclusion, remember that "discrimination against women is incompatible with human dignity and with the welfare of the family and of society." That's included in the preamble to the United Nations' recently adopted declaration.

Our role is a changing world?—it's as important as we want to make it.

Groups Will Sponsor Symposium March 6

To call attention to the need for day care for children, besides that which they get at home, the Dutchess County Social Workers Club and Dutchess Community College will co-sponsor a symposium at DCC Wednesday evening, Mar. 6.

The public is invited to the presentation, which will start at 8 p.m. in the Dutchess Hall Theatre.

Mrs. Hilde Bohmer, president of the Dutchess County Social Workers Club and a consultant for Projects Head Start and Day Care programs, said that the principal speaker will be Mrs. Cornelia Goldsmith.

Mrs. Goldsmith is a consultant in early childhood education for the Office of Economic Opportunity and former chief of the Division on Day Care of the New York City Department of Health.

Other panel members will be Mrs. Phyllis Greenfield, assistant director of the Neighborhood Service Organization of Dutchess County; Ruth Wright, director of day care centers for the Dutchess County Committee for Economic Opportunity; and Mrs. Bohmer.

"We'll take up the history of day care and consider the present needs of children of all ages," Mrs. Bohmer explained.

She said that the purpose of the symposium will be to alert the general public and community leaders that there are many local children of all ages who need some sort of "supplementary care" because of the difficult circumstances under which their families exist.

"Good day care centers can provide an educational child welfare service during the hours the parents cannot provide it," she remarked.

"These facilities are urgently needed for a large number of children to prevent family stress, juvenile delinquency, future drug addiction, and other social ills," Mrs. Bohmer added.

She noted that, since the beginning of the War on Poverty, there has been an "increased interest" in the improvement of day care services.

Members of the Dutchess County Social Workers Club are all working in fields related to social welfare, she explained, and are interested in establishing new or improved services in various areas.

Martha Jean Fitzgerald Weds Walter Maxwell

Miss Martha Jean Fitzgerald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Henry Fitzgerald of Port Ewen, exchanged marriage vows with Walter Clothier Maxwell of Kingston on Saturday, Feb. 24. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Harry McDonell Thayer of 4 Mountainview Avenue, this city, and Morris Clothier Maxwell of 438 Berkley Road, Haverford, Pa.

The ceremony took place in the Church of the Presentation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Port Ewen. The Rev. John Murphy officiated. Traditional organ music was provided by Wayne Cusher and Miss Rita Horvers was soloist. Baskets of white pompons decorated the church for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a brocade A-line gown fashioned with full length skirt, high rolled collar, short sleeves and a matching pillbox hat with a long bouffant veil of silk illusion. She carried a cluster of carnations and stephanotis on a white missal.

Miss Katherine Oest of Ulster Park was maid of honor. She wore an A-line burgundy velvet gown styled with three quarter length sleeves and a burgundy satin bow. A matching velvet Dior bow held her silk illusion veil and she carried a bouquet of white pompons and chrysanthemums.

Miss Natalie Maxwell of Colts Neck, N. Y., sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Kathleen Coughlin of Kingston, cousin of the bride, served as bridesmaids in gown and headpieces identical to that worn by the honor attendant. They carried white roses with carnations.

John Passmore of Levittown, N. Y., was best man. Ushering were MacDonell Thayer of Kingston, brother of the bridegroom; John Fitzgerald of Port Ewen, the bride's brother; Robert Johnson of Poughkeepsie and William Urkiel of New Rochelle.

A reception for 200 guests was given at The Capri 400 in Port Ewen after the church ceremony.

After the church rehearsal the night before the wedding ceremony, a dinner-dance was given at the Governer Clinton Hotel with music by Johnny Knapp. Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Thayer hosted the social event.

The bride was graduated from St. Mary's School and Kingston High School. She is a legal secretary employed by the law firm of Napoletano, Kelly and Saccoman at 243 Wall Street, Kingston.

Mr. Maxwell, an alumnus of Ellenville High School and Marist College, served four years with the U. S. Air Force. He is secretary of Hudson Westchester Radio Inc., and a member of the Kingston Lions Club. Maxwell is employed by the Hudson Valley River Commission in Tarrytown, N. Y.

For her wedding trip to Montreal, Canada, the bride wore a red and navy blue knit ensemble with navy accessories.

When Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell return from their trip, they will be at home at 176 West Chestnut Street, Garden Apartments, Kingston.

Moderns Dream Up Ways to Beat High Cost of Living

By VIVIAN BROWN

NEW YORK (AP) — Everything is going up, up, up, but, teen-age allowances remain the same, point out Cythia and Lisa, a couple of 17-year-olds who are looking for money-making ideas.

One answer to the teen-age money-making dilemma is made-by-hand items. This is an era when such efforts are appreciated. Small sketches, paintings, embroidery, decorated ceramics, are little home projects that can be worked on now and sold at vacation time.

For example, a simple project that requires little talent is decorating mugs or loaf tins that may be used as flower or herb containers in the kitchen.

A motif must have sales appeal. Potential customers can offer clues. The work will go quickly and the investment in materials will be kept to a minimum, if one sticks to one or two basic ideas such as the mug and loaf tin.

The mugs may be painted different colors before you put designs on them to vary their appearance.

Daisies, fish, ducks, bird, dog, cat and abstract designs may prove to be good sales bait. The idea is to make the little mug irresistible.

A jiffy drawing may be made by cutting a design out of newspaper and taping it to the mug so that you can make an outline. Remove the paper and fill it in. Make a striped fish, solid color duck, or a polka dot dog.

If you want to copy an unusual design, tape a cutout to the mug with carbon paper under it. Trace over it with heavy pencil to outline the pattern.

And don't be embarrassed about copying designs. Good artists copy scenes from anything—old books, calendar art, travel brochures.

A small-size metal meat loaf pan makes an ideal little herb container. Put holes in the bottom of it, paint it a pretty color that will be attractive in a kitchen and then put some feathery herb designs on it. If you want a colorful container, decorate it with a beet, tomato, carrot, peas motif. Paint a little scalloped decoration as a border around the top of the container.

If you get an early enough start you might contract with a florist to buy your entire output. The florist will fill the little pots and sink herbs or flowers into the baking tins.

The cost may be figured by estimating the number that can be made in an hour and the approximate cost of materials used during that period.

For example, say each tin costs 20 cents and paint used in an hour costs an additional 20 cents. Make 5 tins in an hour and your cost is roughly 25 cents each. You may make 50 cents on each, providing you with a tidy little profit. If you sell in bulk, your profit will no doubt be less per item, but you will be assured of larger profits in the long run.

Composer's Choice: Greek Tourlou, Demitasse Coffee

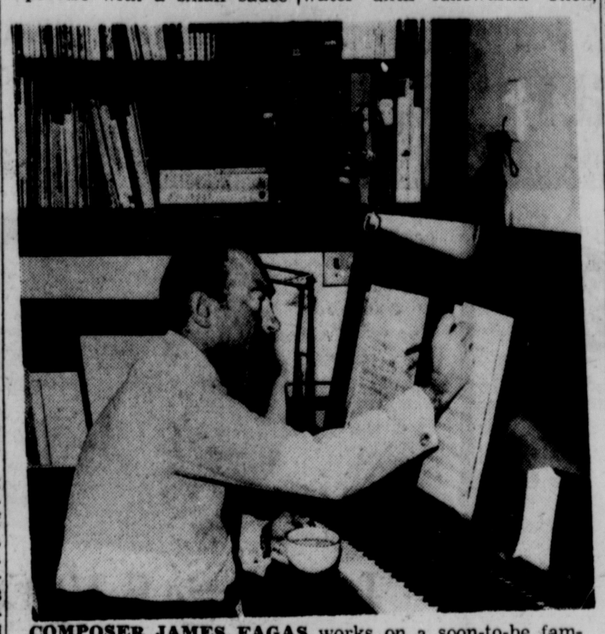

James Fagas is a rare man among men. He's a successful composer in the field of commercial music, a gourmet cook and genius at brewing flavorful, aromatic coffee.

In addition to an array of outdoor sports (including skiing), bachelor Fagas finds relaxation in his tiny penthouse kitchen in the middle of New York City. As he says, "I cook to relax, to forget about the business of composing for a little while. I don't really follow recipes; I sort of play it by ear."

Whatever James Fagas creates in his kitchen turns into a symphony of flavor, like this hearty "Tourlou." Most of the Fagas dishes reflect the marvelous Greek cuisine of his mother, and Tourlou is an ideal representative.

Lamb is a favorite Greek meat. In Tourlou, it is simmered with an assortment of vegetables including zucchini, eggplant, okra and green beans. Some recipes add peeled tomatoes, but James Fagas prefers to leave them out. Serve Tourlou with fresh bread like round Greek "Kouloura."

Greek or Turkish coffee is very dark, thick and sweetish. It is traditionally made in an ibrik, a tall long-handled brass or copper pot, but you could improvise with a small saucepan. For each serving desired, measure a demitasse cup of cold water into the ibrik. Heat the water until lukewarm. Then, add one heaping teaspoon of pulverized dark roast coffee and one teaspoon of sugar per cup. Bring to a boil over medium heat. Pour off half of the coffee into demitasse cups. Boil remaining coffee again and then fill cups. Spoon some of the creamy foam on top. The foam, or "face of the coffee" in Arabic, is almost as important as the dark coffee itself.

COMPOSER JAMES FAGAS works on a soon-to-be familiar tune for a television commercial. He is equally productive in his penthouse kitchen, where he specializes in brewing coffee and cooking Greek dishes.

If Greek coffee does not suit your taste, serve rich demitasse instead. This is made by brewing any favorite brand of coffee with a measurement of four ounces of water to each approved coffee measure (equal to two level measuring tablespoons) of coffee per serving. Start with a spotless coffeemaker and cold, fresh tap water.

James Fagas' Tourlou

(Lamb with Vegetables)

- 2 onions, chopped
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 2 pounds lean lamb, cut in 1½ inch cubes
- Salt to taste
- 1½ cups water, divided
- 2 small zucchini
- 1 medium eggplant
- 2 large green peppers
- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen okra, thawed
- 1 can (1 lb.) cut green beans, drained
- 2 tablespoons brandy
- ¼ cup dry white wine

Cook onions in butter in large skillet or Dutch oven until lightly browned. Add lamb, salt and one-half cup water; simmer until lamb is nearly tender. While meat is cooking, prepare vegetables—cut zucchini in one inch slices, peel eggplant and cut in one and one-half inch cubes, dice green peppers in one-half inch squares. When lamb is nearly tender, add remaining water, zucchini, eggplant and green pepper; cover tightly and cook until vegetables are tender, about 20 minutes. More hot water may be added during cooking if needed. Lower heat; add okra, and green beans; simmer 10 minutes. Stir in brandy and wine; heat to serving temperature. Makes six servings.

Meat inspection will be broadened as a result of the Wholesale Meat Act signed by President Johnson on December 15, 1967, says Louise M. Kakargo, Extension Home Economist. Federal meat inspection, in force since 1906, has applied only to meat crossing state lines or about three-fourths of all meat consumed in this country. Meat processed and sold within the States has been subject to local and state governments. The new law broadens Federal authority and will strengthen state programs, bringing inadequate programs up to federal inspection standards. The 1967 law also authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to provide inspection at any meat plant immediately if it is determined that the plant is a health hazard and the State fails to inspect it. Meat imports, under the new law, must meet the same requirements as meat produced in the United States.

Commercial fruit production in continental United States is a highily specialized and concentrated business. Florida and California are the leaders by far in tonnage of fruit produced. Together the two states grew nearly 80 per cent of the total tonnage of commercial fruit produced in 1966. Washington ran a poor third with about 5 per cent of all fruit; New York was fourth with 3 per cent and Michigan fifth with 2.5 per cent. On a tonnage basis, oranges were produced in the greatest amount, followed by grapes (including grapes for raisins and wine), apples, grapefruit, and peaches.

Processed fruit situation—As a result of unfavorable growing weather, shoppers are finding higher price tags on processed fruit. Fresh fruit supplies for the next few months will also be down from a year ago. The citrus crop is smaller than a year ago. Strawberry acreage for spring harvest is off by about five per cent. Fewer apples remain in regular and controlled atmosphere storage than a year ago at this time.

The pack of canned noncitrus fruits will be considerably smaller than last year. Canned applesauce appears to be the brightest possibility for shoppers. Although the 1967 apple crop was the smallest since 1960, canners are taking a larger share of production so that the final pack of applesauce will be greater than a year ago. But the other major canned fruits are down in pack from last season. The peach pack was off by 27 per cent; the canned pear pack was 50 per cent below the previous year; and the fruit cocktail pack was down 15 per cent. A little more sweet and red sour cherries will be available than last year but the packs a year ago were small. This is also true of purple plums. Fewer apricot figs, and olives are available to shoppers. Latest information on stocks of pineapple indicate about seven per cent more than a year ago.

The pack of frozen fruits was also reduced from a year earlier.

For consumers the main frozen item is strawberries. Current stocks are six per cent below last year at this time. Stocks of most other frozen fruits are below a year ago. The picture is not better for dried fruits. Raisin production dropped by 35 per cent in 1967. However, a good supply of dried prunes is available.

Current stocks of frozen orange concentrate for juice are larger than last year but the pack, now underway, is not expected to be as large as last season because of a smaller orange crop. Thus, prices for frozen orange juice are not expected to reach last year's low levels and shoppers will find fewer specials on frozen orange juice. Stocks of canned grapefruit juice are larger than last year at this time but the opposite is true for canned orange and blended orange and grapefruit juice. Canned tomato juice stocks are up 16 per cent from a year ago.

West Point Play Opens This Evening

"The Secret Life of Sheldon Prufrock" is scheduled for presentation this evening at the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, by members of the First Class (Seniors) in their annual 100th Night Show. The show is open to the public.

A spoof on the James Thurber play, Prufrock is seen dreaming his way out of cadet life. He places himself in the life of Napoleon, football hero Pete Dawkins, "The Commandant" and in general, anyone but Sheldon Prufrock.

The play will open in the South Auditorium in Thayer Hall at 7:30 p.m., the following evening at 8, and will close Sunday with a show at 1:30 p.m. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Sponsored by the Cadet Dialetic Society, the annual show is the first of a series of cadet activities leading up to June week and graduation.

PAMELA AUSTIN, the bouncy blonde beauty who turned an automotive commercial role into a Hollywood opening, is currently under contract to Universial Studios . . . but hopes it won't be renewed. People still identify Pam with the automobile she advertised and can't understand why she quit. She says, "Right now a big part in a good movie is more important to me than making a lot of money under contract." (UPI Telephoto)

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

Here's the way I save when using high-priced coffee.

I use one-fourth LESS coffee than usual for the same amount of water. When it stops perking, I remove the lid, pour out one cup of the perked coffee and pour it back through the strainer.

You'll be surprised at the results. It may be repeated but I have never found it necessary.

Can I convince you to try it?

Eva Pruitt

* * *

Yes, Eva, you did and you're absolutely right. It's good, too, when you're short on coffee.

For the second pot you can also leave the grounds in and add some instant coffee. Perk away again. Bet you con't tell the dif.

Another thing my girl friend does, is use ALL instant coffee in her percolator and her husband hasn't caught on yet. She says it saves emptying grounds every morning besides taking up less room in her cabinet!

Guess that perks off everything beautifully, eh?

Dear Heloise:

Did you know that if you wet your knife or cheese cutter with water before and during the process of slicing cheese, that the cheese slices easier and doesn't stick to the implement?

Dottie K.

Dear Heloise:

Would you please tell us how the military men who march in parades get a mirror shine on their shoes and boots?

A Gentleman

* * *

They use paste wax and buff the shoes with a brush. Then they use a cloth. Some use nylon stockings. This gives a real good shine.

They then reapply more wax with a soft cloth, not a brush this time. The shoes are buffed again with a soft cloth after they flick a little cold water on the toes.

Others actually spit on their shoes and buff again with the soft cloth. This is where the expression "spit and polish" came from.

Ask any paratrooper or parade marcher. He'll tell you.

Dutchess Man's Idea

A Versatile Boat

A Dutchess County man has applied to the U.S. Department of Commerce Patent Office for a patent for a wheel-driven boat which would have a cruising speed on smooth water of 60 to 70 miles an hour with 100 top.

He is Lloyd Lippincott of Staatsburg. The application was made through the New York patent law firm of Polachek and Saulsbury. The boat would be designed to be 10 to 54 feet in length, and it could be operated over land and over water.

On Land or Water

Lippincott said the wheel-driven boat would be suitable for travel through deserts, jungles and the Florida Everglades or in shallow or deep water. He noted that the entire boat could be driven on land if desired, or operated on water as a hydroboat when hitting the proper speed.

"It would be more versatile than a regular boat," Lippincott said, "and it will not capsize."

The plans show that the boat would be equipped with a four-wheel drive and the deep treads on the large tires would make it easily effective to operate through the water. The wheels would be steerable so that the boat could be effectively driven on land.

The invention is directed at a boat having four pneumatic-tired wheels all driven by an engine and the wheels could be steered and braked under control of the pilot on a deck.

"An object of the invention," Lippincott said, "is to provide an amphibious boat with four engine-driven wheels and means for steering and braking the front wheels under the pilot's control." The boat, according to the inventor's plans, would have a separable carriage with four wheels mounted to it and a cabin on top with a forward pilot's position where hand controls are located.

Inboard Engine

The boat would have an inboard engine which can be an internal combustion engine which has an output shaft connected to an automatic transmission assembly of conventional fluid drive construction having high, low, neutral gear and reverse positions.

The engine is controlled by a throttle lever having linkage terminating at the pilot's position. The speed of the wheels and forward movement of the boat is controlled by the hand or foot operated throttle linkage.

Lippincott noted that the boat would have no hydraulics or propeller.

'And Now to The Freeman Newsroom'

The joint news venture of the radio and newspaper facilities is scheduled to start March 4. Barrecchia will handle the newscasts from The Freeman city room at 2 o'clock. (Freeman photo by Kruh)

Ex-Kingstonian

Dr. Tucker Chamber Head

A native of Kingston, Dr. Burton Tucker, who eight years ago started his dental practice in Penn Hills, a thriving suburb of Pittsburgh with a population in excess of 8,000 is becoming actively involved in the civic life of his adopted hometown.

He was recently elected president of the Chamber of Commerce, an unusual responsibility for a dentist. Dr. Tucker listed his main objective, to put into practice the Chamber's slogan, "Community we have; unity we need."

Dr. Tucker hopes to make the Chamber the voice of Penn Hills as a whole and to minimize the previous pattern of many individual neighborhoods and shopping centers working against each other.

KHS Graduate

He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tucker, former residents of Josephine Avenue in this city and is a Kingston High School graduate.

The Tucker family including his wife, Nanette have lived at 209 Yosemite Drive, Penn Hills Park for three years. They have two sons, Jay, in first grade at Forbes School, and Lloyd, 3.

Following graduation and several minor jobs, he was hired as a salesman of a dental gold manufacturer. His training was rigorous starting in the factory learning to make gold and moved up the ladder to a position as detail man and trouble-shooter. For six years he was a top salesman who visited dentists, dental labs and schools all over the country and advised them on gold restoration.

During this period he read dental journals avidly and his ambition to become a dentist kept growing. He finally entered college 10 years after high school graduation. He was admitted on probation attending Pittsburgh University in the morning and Schenley High at night to make up required courses.

Dr. Tucker eventually finished Pitt Dental School and is now on the faculty teaching gold restoration, his specialty.

Other Activities

His other activities include membership on the board of directors of the Penn Hills Rotary Club and he is a past president of the East Suburban Dental Society. He has served on the Board of Management of the YWCA and on the Board of the Western Pennsylvania Odontological Society. The Tuckers are charter members of the Greater Pittsburgh Swim Club. He sings tenor in church choirs and has joined the choirs in most of the major synagogues in Pittsburgh.

Among his projects as Chamber president is the establishment of a central post office in Penn Hills and a fireworks special for the Fourth of July observance.

High Falls Plans For Its 300th

A hollyhock-lined highway for High Falls?

Yes, this and much more has been planned by the town's civic association in preparation for its 300th anniversary next year.

Recognizing the power of the flower, the group intends to make their area the "Town of Flowers" with everyone urged to do their part by planting seeds and flowers.

Route 213 has been selected for the hollyhocks as well as the site for 20 trees to be transplanted there. Members of the civic association will contribute the labor, according to Robert Gannon.

A map indicating the proposed tree plantings was shown the association last night by its tree committee.

Other plans for this year's "dress rehearsal" for the anniversary include a summer carnival, block dance, concerts, geology tour and Fourth of July celebration which will extend over several days.

The association, which meets March 27 at the High Falls firehouse, will have Kenneth Hasbrouck, Ulster County historian, as guest speaker. His talk will center on the history of the county with emphasis on the High Falls area.

Retirement Help

Wesley Wrecks UCCC's Dodge City Dream, 127-102

A CLEAN STEAL: Jack Baylor (R) of Wesley Junior College steals the ball out of the hands of UCCC's Howie Mayfield in a bit of action in the Region XV junior basketball tournament at Trenton last night. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

By CHRIS GEHMAN
(Freeman Sports Staff)

TRENTON, N. J.—Our Ulster County Community College Senators will not be making that trip to Dodge City, Kansas—the fabled TV stronghold of Matt Dillon, Miss Kitty and Festus Hagen.

They were gunned down Thursday night, 127-102, by Wesley Junior College of Dover, Del., in a spectacular shooting match witnesed by more than 1,000 wildly cheering fans in the Steinert High School gym.

In other opening duels in the Region XV junior college tournament, top-seeded Mercer drubbed Johnstown (Pa.) JC, 74-53; Robert Morris of Pittsburgh toppled New York CC, 98-83, and Brandywine of Delaware knocked off Sullivan CC of Monticello, 86-64.

In Friday night's semi-finals it will be Wesley vs. Morris and Mercer vs. Brandywine. Finals are scheduled Saturday, with the winners heading for Dodge City for the NJCAA Nationals later this month.

Uhl Scores 40

Not even a brilliant 40-point performance by Jumpin' Joe Uhl, the top gun of the night, could save the gallant Senators against the inspired, oversized Wesley team which went into the contest with a 16-10 record compared to UCCC's impressive 24-2.

Sparked by a giant 7-foot-2 center Bill Mummert (who wasn't supposed to start) sharpshooting Paul Taglang and Bob Wheeler, a devastating 5-10 field general and play maker, Wesley rolled to a 69-43 halftime lead.

Then Uhl—schackled to nine points after three quick baskets in the first half—broke loose for a 31-point effort before leaving the contest with a couple minutes left to play. It was a fantastic surge that enabled UCCC to pull within nine points (96-87) of Wesley with about 9 minutes left to play.

A Stan Henderson jumper marked the high point of Ulster's fortunes in this bruising contest. Paul Taglang, who dumped 34 points for Wesley (26 in the first half), hit with two consecutive baskets and Mummert a free throw to regain a 101-87 advantage for Wesley. The Senators had run out of steam at this point and it was Wesley to the finish.

A 275-Pound Giant

Mummert, the 275-pound giant who dominated the boards finished with 27 points. Wheeler, in addition to wrecking every type of defense UCCC threw up, netted 23 and Miles Johnson and Jim Baylor added 16 each for Wesley.

Henderson, who kept Ulster in the game in the first half bucketed 26 for a seasonal high. Rod Chando hit 13 and Frank Roselli had 10. Leon Hanna failed to score and exited early in the second half.

A variety of disheartening circumstances ganged up against UCCC — like illness, injuries, switches in seedings and opponents — but they did not have to be ashamed of their performance.

Coach Mike Perry, who had been slightly skeptical of Ulster's chances from the beginning, made no attempt to alibi Ulster's defeat.

"The game got away from us in the first half and they had the height and size and murdered us," said the skipper.

UCCC actually outscored Wesley by a point in the second half — but the winners' overall 60 per cent chart 53 for 88 was just too much to overcome. Ulster shot 41 per cent on 41 for 100 tries.

When tournament officials switched UCCC opponents from Brandywine to Wesley (a 20-point winner over Robert Morris), Ulster was left without a "book" on the opposition and had to play it by ear. Coach Perry, naturally would have scouted his second round opponent.

"I'm proud of Ulster's performance," said Perry after the game. "We simply couldn't keep our momentum and we couldn't handle that giant Mummert."

Perry also had high praise for Bob Wheeler, the dynamic Wesley field general who broke UCCC's press.

"We tried everything," Perry added, "and finally had to play catch up ball and we had to take a lot of chances. There is simply no substitute for height and size in this game."

Perry was high on Wesley's chances to go all the way. "They were really up," he noted. "They're a fine ball club and I think they can win it."

Hayes, Alcindor, Unseld Dominate All-America

by TED MEIER

NEW YORK (AP) — Elvin Hayes, the Big E of the top-ranked University of Houston Cougars dominated the 1968 college basketball All-American announced today by The Associated Press.

Lew Alcindor of UCLA, Westley Unseld of Louisville, Pete Maravich of Louisiana State and Larry Miller of North Carolina rounded out the first team picked by the votes of 322 sports writers and broadcasters.

The 6-foot-8 Hayes, the 7-1½ Alcindor and the 6-8 Unseld are repeaters from the 1967 A-A. Maravich, a 6-5 sophomore, is the nation's leading collegiate scorer. Miller, a 6-3 senior, led North Carolina to 20 straight victories. Hayes and Unseld also are seniors while Alcindor is a junior.

Murphy on Second Team

Calvin Murphy, a 5-10 soph of Niagara, headed the second team which included Neal Walk of Florida, Bob Lanier if St. Bonaventure, Lucius Allen of UCLA and Don May of Dayton.

Mike Warren of UCLA, Rick Mount of Purdue, Jo Jo White of Kansas, Mike Lewis of Duke and Sam Williams of Iowa were selected as a third team.

Members of each of these teams will receive certificates from The Associated Press.

Bill Hosket of Ohio State, Don Smith of Iowa State, Jim McMillian of Columbia, Joe Allen of Bradley, Mike Casey of Kentucky, Ron Williams of West Virginia, Ron Nelson of New Mexico, Rich Travis of Oklahoma City and Merv Jackson of Utah were foremost of the honorable mentions.

Hayes, who scored 39 points as Houston snapped UCLA's 47-game winning streak in January and on Feb. 2 got 62 against Valparaiso as Houston set a single game record of 158 points, almost had a perfect score in the balloting.

Picked by 320 Voters

The Big E, the second highest career scorer in college records, was picked on the first team by 320 voters. The other two put him on the second team. He missed a perfect total of 1,610 points by only six of his 1,604 aggregate. Five points were given for a first team nod, two points for a second team vote.

The towering Alcindor, who led in the voting a year ago, polled 311 firsts and 10 seconds for 1,575 points. Maravich, known as Pistol Pete and the first soph to crack the 1,000-point scoring barrier in a single season, finished a surprise third in the voting.

The son of the LSU coach, Press Maravich, Pete polled 195 firsts and 75 seconds for 1,125. Unseld, who led Louisville to a second straight Missouri Valley conference championship, had 876 points on 130 firsts and 113 seconds. Miller had 681 on 105 firsts and 78 seconds.

Murphy, with 88 firsts and 11 seconds, polled 668 points, missing the first team by only 13 points. Thereafter the totals fell off. Walk had 452, Lanier 409, Allen 374, May 359, Warren 291, Mount 289, White 231, Lewis 218, Williams 123, Hosket had 112 and Smith 102, the best of the honorable mentions.

New Verbal Script: Mathis and Frazier

RHINEBECK, N.Y. (AP) — If their combat in the ring is as good as their verbal war from the training camps, there should be plenty of fireworks when feuding Joe Frazier and Buster Mathis meet face to face in Madison Square Garden Monday night.

Frazier, a fiery puncher in his workouts as well regular fights, has been popping off from Kiamesha Lake on how he expects to "take out Buster in six or seven rounds or maybe earlier."

The brawny, 5-foot-11½, 205-pound Philadelphian undoubtedly has been trying to get Buster mad. He has needled his giant foe with remarks that "he runs like a thief"; "he's chicken-hearted," and "he can't punch."

When these words were passed on to the 6-3, 245-pounder from Grand Rapids, he replied quickly with a few caustic cracks of his own.

"He's a buffoon," said Mathis, "a nitwit for saying those things. He's talking about ending it in five, six or seven rounds because that's all he'll be able to go."

"I've never been knocked down or knocked out and it won't happen against him, you can be sure. He knows only one way to fight. He comes at you. He makes plenty of mistakes, and believe me I'm going to take advantage of them. His tongue may be hanging out after the seventh round, if he's around by then, although I'm prepared to go 15."

Mathis was scheduled to wind up his unusually strenuous boxing campaign today. He has boxed nearly 250 rounds, two of them 15-round sessions, in eight weeks at his camp here.

Despite the optimistic talk from the Mathis camp, Frazier held as the 2-1 favorite in the 15-rounder for the world heavyweight title, New York, Massachusetts and Illinois versions. Illinois awarded recognition Thursday.

With all the big talk from the big boys, the middleweight title fight between champion Emile Griffith and Italy's Nino Benvenuti has been almost overlooked.

Griffith is the 7-5 favorite in the third fight between the two, but the odds might go up by fight time. The bull-shouldered champion has been impressive in his workouts, far more so than the rangy Italian who finished his sparring on Tuesday.

Marquette Player Tops to Al McGuire

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

George Thompson of Marquette is one of the most underrated college basketball players in the country in the opinion of his coach, Al McGuire.

"It's a joke that he doesn't get more recognition" McGuire said after his NCAA-tourney bound Warriors whipped Creighton 75-57 at Milwaukee Thursday night.

The 6-foot-2 junior from Brooklyn, N.Y., "who plays 6-8" in McGuire's words, demonstrated it by scoring 20 points to set a single season Marquette record of 581 points. The old mark of 578 was set by Don Kojis in 1961.

Creighton concentrated its defense on Thompson, one of the prime reasons Marquette gained an NCAA berth with a 21-4 record and the No. 8 spot in The Associated Press rankings.

Shackled in Half

Thompson got only one field goal in the first half, but broke loose after intermission. Bob Portman of Creighton, the nation's fourth highest scorer, managed only 16 points, 14 below his average.

Marquette was the only team in the AP Top Ten to play. Two other tournament teams, Florida State in the NCAA and Fordham in the NIT, each won.

Florida State downed Stetson 72-60 and Fordham whipped NYU 79-73 in the feature of a New York Madison Square Garden twinbill after Manhattan routed Connecticut 83-69.

Top-seeded Davidson walloped William & Mary 107-89 in the opener of the Southern Conference championship tourney at Charlotte. In the other first round games West Virginia defeated East Carolina 76-71, Furman beat Virginia Military 65-52 and Richmond went overtime to down The Citadel 100-88.

Powell Sets Record

Charley Powell, playing at home, set a New Orleans Loyola record of 45 points for a single game as Loyola edged Jacksonville 97-95. Ernie Stover's layup in the last five seconds won the game.

San Jose State knocked Los Angeles Loyola out of a first place tie with Santa Clara in the West Coast Athletic Conference by beating Loyola at home 86-80. In other games Seattle beat Gonzaga 95-87, Drake beat Memphis State 89-61, UC Santa Barbara downed Pepperdine in overtime 94-90 and Rhode Island vanquished Boston U. 96-77.

Welcome Back, King Sturgeon!

Albany beef, they called it, when sturgeon was the king fish of the Hudson river.

Years ago the sturgeon was a major resource of the Hudson river, when commercial fishing was in its pristine era.

Some observers believe the sturgeon was over-fished for its eggs, meat and oil value. Others say that river pollution had much to do with its near extinction.

And suddenly, after a long hiatus, the sturgeon seems to be coming back into its own.

In the good old days, the fish averaged about seven and a half feet in length. However, specimens of recent vintage have shrunk considerably in size, although there have been scattered incidents when a giant "sea sturgeon" has literally ripped shad nets to shreds.

In a recent interview with Nelson Overbagh of Quarryville (near Saugerties), we picked up some interesting information regarding the King of the Hudson. Overbagh, incidentally, is one of the "old timers" who still enjoy his days on the river in search of the elusive sturgeon.

The River Families

In the Kingston area, the sturgeon hauls recall the Naccarato and Turck families and their annual pursuit not only of sturgeon but also of shad and herring. Lou Turck of North Street has extended a standing offer for a shad drift date this spring.

The nets used to haul in sturgeon catches measure from 700 to 900 feet in length and drifted in somewhat the same fashion as shad nets, only much deeper. The sturgeon prefers deep cold water and depths ranging from 38 to 65 feet are needed when making a drift.

Minimum legal size length for sturgeon is 20 inches and, except for the shad pickup season (March 15 to June 1) may be fished at any time. Overbagh expects to brave the river by April 8, weather permitting. Unlike shad, the sturgeon remains alive for several hours, unless it is injured while boating or when taken from the nets.

For the Gourmets

When released from the nets, the sturgeon is carefully milked (the female) for the prize roe (or eggs). Almost ebony black in color, the eggs are carefully screened and salted, then dried.

Overbagh sends most of the selected eggs to New York where they are processed for caviar, the internationally acclaimed delicacy for the cocktail and gourmet set. When queried as to their value, Overbagh smilingly remarked: "Like most items, the middle man makes the profit."

Overbagh smokes many of the fish. Carefully prepared, they are smoked over hickory wood and they do make a choice morsel for TV snacks. They also may be fried or broiled and well we can recall our own dad, while working in the ice harvest at Malden, bringing them home for some mighty fine eating with a minimum of bones. In those days, many of the fish were taken from the river during the ice harvesting season.

As in shad fishing, not all drifts are profitable, says Overbagh. There are times when only two or three are netted and again as many as up to 100 may be taken. As he says: "Most fishermen have those days." Most of his fishing is done in the Barrytown area of the river, fishing the east channel of the Hudson.

His fishing companion? Why, the dear lady of the house, Mrs. Overbagh, who is becoming a veteran of all phases of the art.

Caught 100 Pounder

A few years ago, Overbagh netted a sea sturgeon which measured 6 feet 2 inches long and scaled approximately 100 pounds. Occasionally, larger sturgeon are caught in the propellers of large boats plying the river. A seven and a half foot Atlantic sturgeon was recently taken near Verplanck, near Peekskill when it was stunned by the propeller of a commercial fisherman's boat. It contained more than 50 pounds of the prize roe.

Fishermen hope that as the Hudson river is cleansed by the New York State Pure Water Program, it may once again become a habitat for the sturgeon in commercially profitable quantities.

Communities along the Hudson's banks are now prohibited by a state law from discharging raw sewage into the river. We are proud to say Kingston has a modern sewage treatment plant, even though it may have produced a municipal headache in years past.

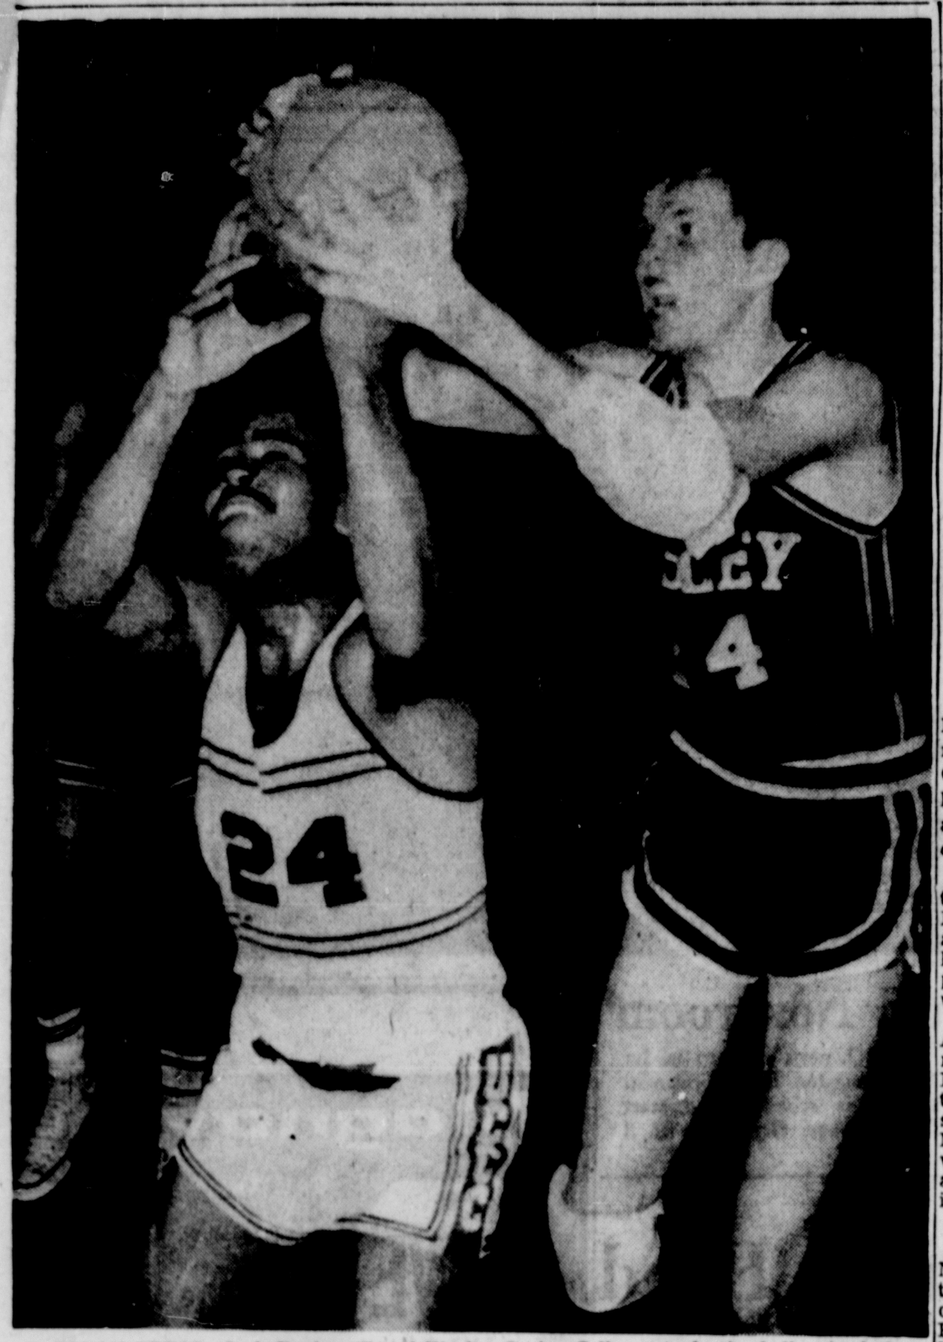

So, let us once more welcome back the sturgeon . . . King fish of the Hudson . . . purveyor of the caviar . . . BY OLD RIP.

Wesley Wrecks UCCC's Dodge City Dream, 127-102

By CHRIS GEHMAN
(Freeman Sports Staff)

TRENTON, N. J.—Our Ulster County Community College Senators will not be making that trip to Dodge City, Kansas—the fabled TV stronghold of Matt Dillon, Miss Kitty and Festus Hagen.

They were gunned down Thursday night, 127-102, by Wesley Junior College of Dover, Del., in a spectacular shooting match witnesed by more than 1,000 wildly cheering fans in the Steinert High School gym.

In other opening duels in the Region XV junior college tournament, top-seeded Mercer drubbed Johnstown (Pa.) JC, 74-53; Robert Morris of Pittsburgh toppled New York CC, 98-83, and Brandywine of Delaware knocked off Sullivan CC of Monticello, 86-64.

In Friday night's semi-finals it will be Wesley vs. Morris and Mercer vs. Brandywine. Finals are scheduled Saturday, with the winners heading for Dodge City for the NJCAA Nationals later this month.

Uhl Scores 40

Not even a brilliant 40-point performance by Jumpin' Joe Uhl, the top gun of the night, could save the gallant Senators against the inspired, oversized Wesley team which went into the contest with a 16-10 record compared to UCCC's impressive 24-2.

Sparked by a giant 7-foot-2 center Bill Mummert (who wasn't supposed to start) sharpshooting Paul Taglang and Bob Wheeler, a devastating 5-10 field general and play maker, Wesley rolled to a 69-43 halftime lead.

Then Uhl—schackled to nine points after three quick baskets in the first half—broke loose for a 31-point effort before leaving the contest with a couple minutes left to play. It was a fantastic surge that enabled UCCC to pull within nine points (96-87) of Wesley with about 9 minutes left to play.

A Stan Henderson jumper marked the high point of Ulster's fortunes in this bruising contest. Paul Taglang, who dumped 34 points for Wesley (26 in the first half), hit with two consecutive baskets and Mummert a free throw to regain a 101-87 advantage for Wesley. The Senators had run out of steam at this point and it was Wesley to the finish.

A 275-Pound Giant

Mummert, the 275-pound giant who dominated the boards finished with 27 points. Wheeler, in addition to wrecking every type of defense UCCC threw up, netted 23 and Miles Johnson and Jim Baylor added 16 each for Wesley.

Henderson, who kept Ulster in the game in the first half bucketed 26 for a seasonal high. Rod Chando hit 13 and Frank Roselli had 10. Leon Hanna failed to score and exited early in the second half.

A variety of disheartening circumstances ganged up against UCCC — like illness, injuries, switches in seedings and opponents — but they did not have to be ashamed of their performance.

Coach Mike Perry, who had been slightly skeptical of Ulster's chances from the beginning, made no attempt to alibi Ulster's defeat.

"The game got away from us in the first half and they had the height and size and murdered us," said the skipper.

UCCC actually outscored Wesley by a point in the second half — but the winners' overall 60 per cent chart 53 for 88 was just too much to overcome. Ulster shot 41 per cent on 41 for 100 tries.

When tournament officials switched UCCC opponents from Brandywine to Wesley (a 20-point winner over Robert Morris), Ulster was left without a "book" on the opposition and had to play it by ear. Coach Perry, naturally would have scouted his second round opponent.

"I'm proud of Ulster's performance," said Perry after the game. "We simply couldn't keep our momentum and we couldn't handle that giant Mummert."

Perry also had high praise for Bob Wheeler, the dynamic Wesley field general who broke UCCC's press.

"We tried everything," Perry added "and finally had to play catch up ball and we had to take a lot of chances. There is simply no substitute for height and size in this game."

Perry was high on Wesley's chances to go all the way. "They were really up," he noted. "They're a fine ball club and I think they can win it."

George Thompson of Marquette is one of the most underrated college basketball players in the country in the opinion of his coach, Al McGuire.

"It's a joke that he doesn't get more recognition" McGuire said after his NCAA-tourney bound Warriors whipped Creighton 75-57 at Milwaukee Thursday night.

The 6-foot-2 junior from Brooklyn, N.Y., "who plays 6-8" in McGuire's words, demonstrated it by scoring 20 points to set a single season Marquette record of 581 points. The old mark of 578 was set by Don Kojis in 1961.

Creighton concentrated its defense on Thompson, one of the prime reasons Marquette gained an NCAA berth with a 21-4 record and the No. 8 spot in The Associated Press rankings.

Shackled in Half

Thompson got only one field goal in the first half, but broke loose after intermission. Bob Portman of Creighton, the nation's fourth highest scorer, managed only 16 points, 14 below his average.

Marquette was the only team in the AP Top Ten to play. Two other tournament teams, Florida State in the NCAA and Fordham in the NIT, each won.

Florida State downed Stetson 72-60 and Fordham whipped NYU 79-73 in the feature of a New York Madison Square Garden twinbill after Manhattan routed Connecticut 83-69.

Top-seeded Davidson walloped William & Mary 107-88 in the opener of the Southern Conference championship tourney at Charlotte. In the other first round games West Virginia defeated East Carolina 76-71, Furman beat Virginia Military 65-52 and Richmond went overtime to down The Citadel 100-88.

In the semifinals tonight West Virginia plays Richmond and Davidson takes on Furman.

Powell Sets Record

Charley Powell, playing at home, set a New Orleans Loyola record of 45 points for a single game as Loyola edged Jacksonville 97-95. Ernie Stover's layup in the last five seconds won the game.

San Jose State knocked Los Angeles Loyola out of a first place tie with Santa Clara in the West Coast Athletic Conference by beating Loyola at home 86-80. In other games Seattle beat Gonzaga 95-87, Drake beat Memphis State 89-61, UC Santa Barbara downed Pepperdine in overtime 94-90 and Rhode Island vanquished Boston U. 96-77.

Welcome Back, King Sturgeon!

Albany beef, they called it, when sturgeon was the king fish of the Hudson river.

Years ago the sturgeon was a major resource of the Hudson river, when commercial fishing was in its pristine era.

Some observers believe the sturgeon was over-fished for its eggs, meat and oil value. Others say that river pollution had much to do with its near extinction.

And suddenly, after a long hiatus, the sturgeon seems to be coming back into its own.

In the good old days, the fish averaged about seven and a half feet in length. However, specimens of recent vintage have shrunk considerably in size, although there have been scattered incidents when a giant "sea sturgeon" has literally ripped shad nets to shreds.

In a recent interview with Nelson Overbagh of Quarryville (near Saugerties), we picked up some interesting information regarding the King of the Hudson. Overbagh, incidentally, is one of the "old timers" who still enjoy his days on the river in search of the elusive sturgeon.

The River Families

In the Kingston area, the sturgeon hauls recall the Naccarato and Turck families and their annual pursuit not only of sturgeon but also of shad and herring. Lou Turck of North Street has extended a standing offer for a shad drift date this spring.

The nets used to haul in sturgeon catches measure from 700 to 900 feet in length and drifted in somewhat the same fashion as shad nets, only much deeper. The sturgeon prefers deep cold water and depths ranging from 38 to 65 feet are needed when making a drift.

Minimum legal size length for sturgeon is 20 inches and, except for the shad pickup season (March 15 to June 1) may be fished at any time. Overbagh expects to brave the river by April 8, weather permitting. Unlike shad, the sturgeon remains alive for several hours, unless it is injured while boating or when taken from the nets.

For the Gourmets

When released from the nets, the sturgeon is carefully milked (the female) for the prize roe (or eggs). Almost ebony black in color, the eggs are carefully screened and salted, then dried.

Overbagh sends most of the selected eggs to New York where they are processed for caviar, the internationally acclaimed delicacy for the cocktail and gourmet set. When queried as to their value, Overbagh smilingly remarked: "Like most items, the middle man makes the profit."

Overbagh smokes many of the fish. Carefully prepared, they are smoked over hickory wood and they do make a choice morsel for TV snacks. They also may be fried or broiled and well we can recall our own dad, while working in the ice harvest at Malden, bringing them home for some mighty fine eating with a minimum of bones. In those days, many of the fish were taken from the river during the ice harvesting season.

As in shad fishing, not all drifts are profitable, says Overbagh. There are times when only two or three are netted and again as many as up to 100 may be taken. As he says: "Most fishermen have those days." Most of his fishing is done in the Barrytown area of the river, fishing the east channel of the Hudson.

His fishing companion? Why, the dear lady of the house, Mrs. Overbagh, who is becoming a veteran of all phases of the art.

Caught 100 Pounder

A few years ago, Overbagh netted a sea sturgeon which measured 6 feet 2 inches long and scaled approximately 100 pounds. Occasionally, larger sturgeon are caught in the propellers of large boats plying the river. A seven and a half foot Atlantic sturgeon was recently taken near Verplanck, near Peekskill when it was stunned by the propeller of a commercial fisherman's boat. It contained more than 50 pounds of the prize roe.

Fishermen hope that as the Hudson river is cleansed by the New York State Pure Water Program, it may once again become a habitat for the sturgeon in commercially profitable quantities.

Communities along the Hudson's banks are now prohibited by a state law from discharging raw sewage into the river. We are proud to say Kingston has a modern sewage treatment plant, even though it may have produced a municipal headache in years past.

So, let us once more welcome back the sturgeon . . . King fish of the Hudson . . . purveyor of the caviar . . . BY OLD RIP.

Leitner Captures Pro Skiers Dual Slalom at Hunter

TWO OF A KIND — St. Louis World Series hero Bob Gibson points out: "Look Bird" No Birds allowed on this field except Redbirds." The brightly feathered fellow is really a Toucan from St. Petersburg Sunken Gardens. (UPI TELEPHOTO).

First to Win Two Straight

By MIKE HELFNER
(Freeman Sports Staff)

Hias Leitner brought a roar — then oohs, then aahs— from the crowd of 1,500 by streaking across the finish line in a 59-second super performance that made him the victor in the Hunter Mountain Professional Ski Racers Association Race Thursday.

Flying down the hill with reckless abandon, Leitner thrilled the onlookers with a powerful finish kick. None of the 52 earlier runs had been under a minute. The crowd, sensing a lightning-fast run, strained to get a glimpse at Leitner zooming by.

Disregarding the blinding snowstorm that handicapped the day's second-runs and forcing Senator Robert F. Kennedy to cancel his appearance (he was to present the awards) — Leitner turned on the speed, rushing headlong past the final gate and through the timing devices.

Once he cleared all 47 Dual-Slalom gates (did not brush a single one), Leitner planted his poles deep in the snow, pushed hard, and literally flew the final 25-yards to the finish line.

Secoud Tour Win

It was Leitner's second PSRA tour win in a row. Hunter is sixth on the PSRA seven-stop schedule, and Leitner combined this victory with the Loon Mt. triumph in early February (Loon is the fifth stop).

Leitner had to come up with a superlative effort at Loon, coming-from behind off the runner-up standing in the first-run. He successfully overtook the leader, Egon Zimmermann.

Repeating the second - run magic, this time using a narrow 2/100's-of-a-second edge (built on a 1:00.33 first run clocking), Leitner held off three challengers.

Leitner chalked up his first-run lead on course number one, the course on the left (Dual-slalom racing splits the course in two, sending two racers down at the same time). This slope was the better of the two, with consistently faster times being registered – compared to the right hand course, number two.

Duvillard Excels

Of the skiers competing on number two, Adrien Duvillard had the best time. He stopped the watches in 1:00.35, blazing fast for that course.

Behind him was the surprising Pedro Klempa in 1:01.35 while Ernest Hinterseer trailed Leitner on one, coming in with a 1:00.91 time.

The skiers switched courses for the second run. They also changed starting positions, going to a reverse, first-run-higher finish — second run last start.

As second-half competition began, a light snow started to fall. The snowfall quickly picked up momentum, blanketing the course before the third set of racers could get off.

Not scheduled to race for some time, the four, Leitner, Duvillard, Hinterseer and Klempa watched the other competitors, hoping to see how they navigated the snowfall-changed course.

The snowfall increased in intensity, cutting the visibility to a minimum. By the time Duvillard was ready on number one and Hinterseer set on two, the top of the ridge was obscured and the course conditions had changed. Now the right hill (number two) was faster.

The 2,000-foot-long Hunter slope starts out of view of the spectator. The participant comes into view midway down the hill. With the all-encompassing snow fall now blocking off most of the course, the finish-line judges and spectators could not see the racers coming down until three-fourths of the course was completed.

Hinterseer Second

Hinterseer, going full-tilt down number two, whizzed by the finish line in 1:01.12, best second run to that point, took the lead when Duvillard fell, failing to complete the course.

Figuring the blinding snow to help Hinterseer's time stand-up, spectators and already-done skiers congratulated him on the seeming-win.

But waiting to race were Klempa on one and Leitner on two. Off quickly, Leitner called on his four-year professional experience for help. He rushed downhill unbothered in the 59 seconds to defeat Hinterseer, piling up a total of 1:59.33 to 2:02.03. Klempa ended up third in 2:02.87.

In peak condition, Leitner simply overpowered the course and the hard snowfall. He was bothered by the falling snow and the tight gates, saying, "Even without snow hitting you in the face, you cannot see the upcoming gates here. You can't plot your moves because they (the gates) jump right up on you."

Of the 37 racers, nearly 20 were disqualified for various reasons — most, however, for missing gates. Leitner came close to bumping a few, yet somehow managed to avoid the course-studded markers. Both Klempa and Hinterseer brushed a couple, while Duvillard was knocked out of the race when he collided with one.

Real Challenge

A silver medal winner in the 1960 Olympics at Squaw Valley, Calif., Leitner believed Hunter Mountain to have a more difficult course than the Olympic challenger.

"The difference is the spacing of the gates. At Squaw Valley, I was able to see and plan what to do before coming to a gate. You don't do that here. It is a most challenging course, perhaps the toughest I have been on in America.

Designed and prepared by Hunter's Karl Plattner, the course was termed the toughest of the tour's seven. Every racer agreed to that.

Leitner, however, was not cheated out of his chance to converse with Sen. Kennedy. Leitner and several other racers had a chance to chat with the senator by phone from his New York City (fog bound) office.

S-I-T-Z-M-A-R-K-S

By CHARLES J. TIANO
(Freeman Sports Editor)

Only the overnight retreat from the springlike weather could possibly justify an attempt at another ski column. It seemed that winter 1968 had just vanished from the landscape and the frustrated golfers were starting to stir from their winter lethargy.

Things had gotten so bad for golf courses that unless some measurable amount of snow decended upon us the course superintendents would have faced a dilemma similar to the 1961-62 winter.

Lack of sufficient and steady snowfall has a serious affect on the quality of golf course grass, the experts tell us. The process of dessication (now there's a fine word for you) sets in if there isn't uniform snowfall and accumulation over a winter. But try and sell that line to the unhappy skier who has been sliding on ice trails for the past several weeks.

IN THE 1965 Cross Country race at Rosendale, an entry was received from a young lady from Oslo, who was going to school in Schenectady at the time. She asked in her letter, if she could race against the men if there was no girl's race.

There was a girl's race in which Oslo's Babben Enger won very handily, defeating Rosendale's Fannie Liekoski and Marianne Williams. Miss Enger met and married Larry Damon, America's top cross country man, and the two moved back to Norway, with Damon retaining his U.S. citizenship.

In the Grenoble Olympics, Babben Enger Damon raced the anchor leg on the Norwegian women's relay team and came from behind to beat a Russian girl in a thrilling finish. Her husband, Larry, was on the American team, of course, but in this case cheering for the Norwegians. American women were not represented in the cross country events in the Grenoble Olympics.

SCHUSS NOTES: Men and women of the U.S. Team and Olympic skiers from other countries will compete in the U.S. Challenger Races—a giant slalom Saturday and a slalom on Sunday at Stratton Mountain, Vt. Six of the 20 members of the Olympic Ski Team are Vermonters—Suzy and Rick Chaffee and Rebel Ryan from Rutland; Rose Fortna from Warren and Erica Skinger and Billy Kidd from Stowe.

Arlene and Clifford Spiesman (she's the Ulster county woman's golf champion) postcard from Snowmass at Aspen where there was 62 inches of snow and blue skies the day they gave it a whirl .

Snowmass, which opened in December, is one of the new complexes at Aspen. It has five double chairlifts and a satellite community to the city of 800 beds with supporting shops, restaurants and night spots.

The new complex added to Vail and Winter Park gives Aspen a total of 175 miles of ski trails on four mountains (Ajax, the other) and lift service to move 20,000 skiers per hour.

Aspen is now sprucing up for Interski, the International Congress for Ski Instruction to be held April 19-28. (They must be kidding).

DAVOS SKI CENTER at Woodridge, a popular mecca for many area skiniks stages its first annual Professional Ski Instrutors Slalom Sunday at 2:30 p. m. The slalom is sponsored jointly by the area and the Peter Martini Ski School. Six prizes will be awarded, ranging from $100 to $10, with trophy awards for the first three finishers.

It doesn't look like Walter Williams will ever get that New York State Cross Country championship race in this season.

This has not been a happy season for Duke Schneider, the Rosendale jumping favorite. Duke survived a nasty spill on Mt. Joppenbergh but wasn't so lucky a few weeks later at Salisbury, Conn. where he suffered severe lacerations and multiple bruises after an excellent 172-foot jump.

The Trail Sweepers Club which kept its light pretty much under a bushel this season made a collective fine showing in the recent Art and Lili Draper Memorial Races at Belleayre Ski Center.

SKIERS ACROSS THE eastern landscape will have an opportunity to learn the exact extent of their skiing abilities this weekend, as the U.S. Eastern Amateur Ski Association, in cooperation with the National Ski Patrol, sponsors Basic and Intermediate Proficiency Tests at nearly two dozen widely separated ski areas.

Harry Stern, the Hunter Mountain Ski Patrol Leader is the program coordinator. The tests are designed by the USEASA for the fundamental purpose of assuring greater safety for its members on the ski slopes.

Among the area centers participating are: Holiday Mountain, Monticello; Ski Minne, Lake Minnewaska; Highmount, Belleayre, Hunter, Davos, Grossinger's Mt. Beacon, Scotch Valley, Windham and Kiamesha Lake.

It looked like a good weekend for skiers up around Woodstock way today—and then we came to Kingston! And how about that March coming in like a lion!

Jaycees Launch Intensive Plans for '68 Spectacular

The weekend of July 26-27 is still a long time off but intense planning has begun by area Jaycees for the New York State Jaycee championships in track and field, tennis and golf in Kingston,

For the third consecutive year, Jaycees from District II of Division II comprised of Kingston, Saugerties, Woodstock, New Paltz, Coxsackie and Hudson will host the championships. Young athletes representing more than 200 communities will converge on Kingston for the two-day sports spectacular.

Events begin Friday, July 26, with preliminary tennis matches at Forsyth Park and first round golf at Wiltwyck Country Club. Golf and tennis shares the spotlight with the track and field championships on Saturday, the 27th.

The weekend concludes with an awards banquet on Saturday night at the Gov. Clinton hotel.

District Jaycee president John Spratt of the Woodstock Jaycees is general chairman of the event. George Leombruno of Saugerties Jaycees is co-chairman as he was in 1967. Ray Lauterbach of the Woodstock Jaycees, New York State chairman of Jaycees youth and sports activities, is co-ordinator for the local events.

Kickers Battle Poughkeepsie

The long awaited clash between Poughkeepsie's new German-American Soccer Association entry and Kingston Sport Club takes place Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at Poughkeepsie.

Kingston is one point off the league pace, with the Blues and Whites several rungs below in the standings.

In other League Division contests, Schwaben at College Point; Bavarian visits American Czechs and West New York hosts Dalmatinac.

STATE SWIMMER — Paul Rodden of Kingston, a member of the New Paltz State U. Frosh swim team participates in the State University of New York Athletic Conference swimming championships, March 1-2, at Fredonia State U. A former Kingston High swimmer, Rodden, a free style specialist, competed against such schools as Penn Military, Hackley School and Blair Academy in State 2-4 record this year. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rodden of Esopus.

When Will Knicks Ever Beat Hawks?

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Boston Celtics? A snap for the New York Knicks. The Philadelphia 76ers? A breeze. But, ah, those St. Louis Hawks.

The Knicks are now 1-6 against the Hawks after Thursday night's 105-102 overtime defeat by St. Louis in a National Basketball Association game at Miami.

New York has won two games each against the Celtics and the 76ers and has two games left against each. Last year, the Knicks could beat Philadelphia only once and Boston not at all.

St. Louis has presented a problem for New York all year. Most of the games have been close, but somehow the Hawks are usually on top when the gun sounds.

In other NBA games Los Angeles beat Chicago at Evansville, Ind., 117-107 and Cincinnati overcame San Diego 120-114 on the West Coast.

In the American Basketball Association, Houston edged Dallas 101-100, Pittsburgh topped Kentucky 123-119 and Minnesota downed Oakland 125-115 in overtime.

Bill Bridges led the scoring for the Hawks with 22 points and had an equal number of rebounds. Willis Reed had 28 points and 19 rebounds for the Knicks.

Los Angeles took a 47-45 lead and never let Chicago catch up as Elgin Baylor dropped in 27 points, one more than the Bulls' Bob Boozer.

Oscar Robertson, returning to full time play after missing four games with injury, teamed with Adrian Smith for 51 points and led Cincinnati on a 34-19 splurge in the third quarter that halted San Diego. Henry Finkel scored 21 points for the Rockets.

Leitner Captures Pro Skiers Dual Slalom at Hunter

TWO OF A KIND — St. Louis World Series hero Bob Gibson points out: "Look Bird" No Birds allowed on this field except Redbirds." The brightly feathered fellow is really a Toucan from St. Petersburg Sunken Gardens. (UPI TELEPHOTO).

First to Win Two Straight

(Freeman Sports Staff)

Hias Leitner brought a roar — then oohs, then aahs— from the crowd of 1,500 by streaking across the finish line in a 59-second super performance that made him the victor in the Hunter Mountain Professional Ski Racers Association Race Thursday.

Flying down the hill with reckless abandon, Leitner thrilled the onlookers with a powerful finish kick. None of the 52 earlier runs had been under a minute. The crowd, sensing a lightning-fast run, strained to get a glimpse at Leitner zooming by.

Disregarding the blinding snowstorm that handicapped the day's second-runs and forcing Senator Robert F. Kennedy to cancel his appearance (he was to present the awards) — Leitner turned on the speed, rushing headlong past the final gate and through the timing devices.

Once he cleared all 47 Dual-Slalom gates (did not brush a single one), Leitner planted his poles deep in the snow, pushed hard, and literally flew the final 25-yards to the finish line.

Secoud Tour Win

It was Leitner's second PSRA tour win in a row. Hunter is sixth on the PSRA seven-stop schedule, and Leitner combined this victory with the Loon Mt. triumph in early February (Loon is the fifth stop).

Leitner had to come up with a superlative effort at Loon, coming from behind off the runner-up standing in the first-run. He successfully overtook the leader, Egon Zimmermann.

Repeating the second - run magic, this time using a narrow 2/100's-of-a-second edge (built on a 1:00.33 first run clocking), Leitner held off three challengers.

Leitner chalked up his first-run lead on course number one, the course on the left (Dual-slalom racing splits the course in two, sending two racers down at the same time). This slope was the better of the two, with consistently faster times being registered - compared to the right hand course, number two.

Duvillard Excels

Of the skiers competing on number two, Adrien Duvillard had the best time. He stopped the watches in 1:00.35, blazing fast for that course.

Behind him was the surprising Pedro Klempa in 1:01.35 while Ernest Hinterseer trailed Leitner on one, coming in with a 1:00.91 time.

The skiers switched courses for the second run. They also changed starting positions, going to a reverse, first-run-higher finish — second run last start.

As second-half competition began, a light snow started to fall. The snowfall quickly picked up momentum, blanketing the course before the third set of racers could get off.

Not scheduled to race for some time, the four, Leitner, Duvillard, Hinterseer and Klempa watched the other competitors, hoping to see how they navigated the snowfall-changed course.

The snowfall increased in intensity, cutting the visibility to a minimum. By the time Duvillard was ready on number one and Hinterseer set on two, the top of the ridge was obscured and the course conditions had changed. Now the right hill (number two) was faster.

The 2,000-foot-long Hunter slope starts out of view of the spectator. The participant comes into view midway down the hill. With the all-encompassing snow fall now blocking off most of the course, the finish-line judges and spectators could not see the racers coming down until three-fourths of the course was completed.

Hinterseer Second

Hinterseer, going full-tilt down number two, whizzed by the finish line in 1:01.12, best second run to that point, took the lead when Duvillard fell, failing to complete the course.

Figuring the blinding snow to help Hinterseer's time stand-up, spectators and already-done skiers congratulated him on the seeming-win.

But waiting to race were Klempa on one and Leitner on two. Off quickly, Leitner called on his four-year professional experience for help. He rushed downhill unbothered in the 59 seconds to defeat Hinterseer, piling up a total of 1:59.33 to 2:02.03. Klempa ended up third in 2:02.87.

In peak condition, Leitner simply overpowered the course and the hard snowfall. He was bothered by the falling snow and the tight gates, saying, "Even without snow hitting you in the face, you cannot see the upcoming gates here. You can't plot your moves because they (the gates) jump right up on you."

Of the 37 racers, nearly 20 were disqualified for various reasons — most, however, for missing gates. Leitner came close to bumping a few, yet somehow managed to avoid the course-studded markers. Both Klempa and Hinterseer brushed a couple, while Duvillard was knocked out of the race when he collided with one.

Real Challenge

A silver medal winner in the 1960 Olympics at Squaw Valley, Calif., Leitner believed Hunter Mountain to have a more difficult course than the Olympic challenger.

"The difference is the spacing of the gates. At Squaw Valley, I was able to see and plan what to do before coming to a gate. You don't do that here. It is a most challenging course, perhaps the toughest I have been on in America.

Designed and prepared by Hunter's Karl Plattner, the course was termed the toughest of the tour's seven. Every racer agreed to that.

Leitner, however, was not cheated out of his chance to converse with Sen. Kennedy. Leitner and several other racers had a chance to chat with the senator by phone from his New York City (fog bound) office.

S-I-T-Z-M-A-R-K-S

By CHARLES J. TIANO
(Freeman Sports Editor)

Only the overnight retreat from the springlike weather could possibly justify an attempt at another ski column. It seemed that winter 1968 had just vanished from the landscape and the frustrated golfers were starting to stir from their winter lethargy.

Things had gotten so bad for golf courses that unless some measurable amount of snow decended upon us the course superintendents would have faced a dilemma similar to the 1961-62 winter.

Lack of sufficient and steady snowfall has a serious affect on the quality of golf course grass, the experts tell us. The process of dessication (now there's a fine word for you) sets in if there isn't uniform snowfall and accumulation over a winter. But try and sell that line to the unhappy skier who has been sliding on ice trails for the past several weeks.

IN THE 1965 Cross Country race at Rosendale, an entry was received from a young lady from Oslo, who was going to school in Schenectady at the time. She asked in her letter, if she could race against the men if there was no girl's race.

There was a girl's race in which Oslo's Babben Enger won very handily, defeating Rosendale's Fannie Liekoski and Marianne Williams. Miss Enger met and married Larry Damon, America's top cross country man, and the two moved back to Norway, with Damon retaining his U.S. citizenship.

In the Grenoble Olympics, Babben Enger Damon raced the anchor leg on the Norwegian women's relay team and came from behind to beat a Russian girl in a thrilling finish. Her husband, Larry, was on the American team, of course, but in this case cheering for the Norwegians. American women were not represented in the cross country events in the Grenoble Olympics.

SCHUSS NOTES: Men and women of the U.S. Team and Olympic skiers from other countries will compete in the U.S. Challenger Races—a giant slalom Saturday and a slalom on Sunday at Stratton Mountain, Vt. Six of the 20 members of the Olympic Ski Team are Vermonters—Suzy and Rick Chaffee and Rebel Ryan from Rutland; Rose Fortna from Warren and Erica Skinger and Billy Kidd from Stowe.

Arlene and Clifford Spiesman (she's the Ulster county woman's golf champion) postcard from Snowmass at Aspen where there was 62 inches of snow and blue skies the day they gave it a whirl .

Snowmass, which opened in December, is one of the new complexes at Aspen. It has five double chairlifts and a satellite community to the city of 800 beds with supporting shops, restaurants and night spots.

The new complex added to Vail and Winter Park gives Aspen a total of 175 miles of ski trails on four mountains (Ajax, the other) and lift service to move 20,000 skiers per hour.

Aspen is now sprucing up for Interski, the International Congress for Ski Instruction to be held April 19-28. (They must be kidding).

DAVOS SKI CENTER at Woodridge, a popular mecca for many area skiniks stages its first annual Professional Ski Instrutors Slalom Sunday at 2:30 p. m. The slalom is sponsored jointly by the area and the Peter Martini Ski School. Six prizes will be awarded, ranging from $100 to $10, with trophy awards for the first three finishers.

It doesn't look like Walter Williams will ever get that New York State Cross Country championship race in this season.

This has not been a happy season for Duke Schneider, the Rosendale jumping favorite. Duke survived a nasty spill on Mt. Joppenbergh but wasn't so lucky a few weeks later at Salisbury, Conn. where he suffered severe lacerations and multiple bruises after an excellent 172-foot jump.

The Trail Sweepers Club which kept its light pretty much under a bushel this season made a collective fine showing in the recent Art and Lili Draper Memorial Races at Belleayre Ski Center.

SKIERS ACROSS THE eastern landscape will have an opportunity to learn the exact extent of their skiing abilities this weekend, as the U.S. Eastern Amateur Ski Association, in cooperation with the National Ski Patrol, sponsors Basic and Intermediate Proficiency Tests at nearly two dozen widely separated ski areas.

Harry Stern, the Hunter Mountain Ski Patrol Leader is the program coordinator. The tests are designed by the USEASA for the fundamental purpose of assuring greater safety for its members on the ski slopes.

Among the area centers participating are: Holiday Mountain, Monticello; Ski Minne, Lake Minnewaska; Highmount, Belleayre, Hunter, Davos, Grossinger's Mt. Beacon, Scotch Valley, Windham and Kiamesha Lake.

It looked like a good weekend for skiers up around Woodstock way today—and then we came to Kingston! And how about that March coming in like a lion!

Jaycees Launch Intensive Plans for '68 Spectacular

The weekend of July 26-27 is still a long time off but intense planning has begun by area Jaycees for the New York State Jaycee championships in track and field, tennis and golf in Kingston.

For the third consecutive year, Jaycees from District II of Division II comprised of Kingston, Saugerties, Woodstock, New Paltz, Coxsackie and Hudson will host the championships. Young athletes representing more than 200 communities will converge on Kingston for the two-day sports spectacular.

Events begin Friday, July 26, with preliminary tennis matches at Forsyth Park and first round golf at Wiltwyck Country Club. Golf and tennis shares the spotlight with the track and field championships on Saturday, the 27th.

The weekend concludes with an awards banquet on Saturday night at the Gov. Clinton hotel. District Jaycee president John Spratt of the Woodstock Jaycees is general chairman of the event. George Leombruno of Saugerties Jaycees is co-chairman as he was in 1967. Ray Lauterbach of the Woodstock Jaycees, New York State chairman of Jaycees youth and sports activities, is co-ordinator for the local events.

Kickers Battle Poughkeepsie

The long awaited clash between Poughkeepsie's new German-American Soccer Association entry and Kingston Sport Club takes place Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at Poughkeepsie.

Kingston is one point off the league pace, with the Blues and Whites several rungs below in the standings.

In other League Division contests, Schwaben at College Point; Bavarian visits American Czechs and West New York hosts Dalmatinac.

STATE SWIMMER — Paul Rodden of Kingston, a member of the New Paltz State U. Frosh swim team participates in the State University of New York Athletic Conference swimming championships, March 1-2, at Fredonia State U. A former Kingston High swimmer, Rodden, a free style specialist, competed against such schools as Penn Military, Hackley School and Blair Academy in State 2-4 record this year. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rodden of Esopus.

When Will Knicks Ever Beat Hawks?

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Boston Celtics? A snap for the New York Knicks. The Philadelphia 76ers? A breeze. But, ah, those St. Louis Hawks.

The Knicks are now 1-6 against the Hawks after Thursday night's 105-102 overtime defeat by St. Louis in a National Basketball Association game at Miami.

New York has won two games each against the Celtics and the 76ers and has two games left against each. Last year, the Knicks could beat Philadelphia only once and Boston not at all.

St. Louis has presented a problem for New York all year. Most of the games have been close, but somehow the Hawks are usually on top when the gun sounds.

A basket by Dick Barnett with 13 seconds left in regulation time tied the game for New York Thursday night, but Joe Caldwell's basket in the first five seconds of the overtime period put the Hawks ahead for good.

In other NBA games Los Angeles beat Chicago at Evansville, Ind., 117-107 and Cincinnati overcame San Diego 120-114 on the West Coast.

In the American Basketball Association, Houston edged Dallas 101-100, Pittsburgh topped Kentucky 123-119 and Minnesota downed Oakland 125-115 in overtime.

Bill Bridges led the scoring for the Hawks with 22 points and had an equal number of rebounds. Willis Reed had 28 points and 19 rebounds for the Knicks.

Los Angeles took a 47-45 lead and never let Chicago catch up as Elgin Baylor dropped in 27 points, one more than the Bulls' Bob Boozer.

Oscar Robertson, returning to full time play after missing four games with injury, teamed with Adrian Smith for 51 points and led Cincinnati on a 34-19 splurge in the third quarter that halted San Diego. Henry Finkel scored 21 points for the Rockets.

The Kerhonkson Lions heard an informative talk recently when guest speakers Joseph Torraca, Ulster County District Attorney, and Thomas Mayone, Special Investigator of the District Attorney's office, addressed the group at their regular dinner meeting.

The subject of drug abuse by the youth of the country was discussed in depth and solutions suggested. The Lions were informed that an educational program was being persued to make young people aware of the ravages of drug abuse. Talks are being given and films shown in the area schools urging the students to avoid involvment in drugs.

Action Hints Tax Opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has cleared a $3 billion segment of President Johnson's tax program amid indications its key committee may be softening its opposition to the proposed income tax hike.

But a move already is under way in the Senate that could further endanger the administration's over-all tax program.

The House passed Thursday, without even calling the roll, legislation to continue beyond their April 1 drop-off dates the present excise taxes on automobiles and telephone service. The bill also provides for a speed-up in corporation income tax collections.

The proposed 10 per cent income tax surcharge remains bottled up in the House Ways and Means Committee. Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., said he is looking for more budget cutting before considering the tax increase.

But Mills conceded—for perhaps the first time since Johnson offered the tax boost plan last year—that certain circumstances could force Congress' hand on the tax hike.

Mino Reserves New Trial Bid

A motion for a new trial was filed for Peter Ferraro, 27, of this city, who was convicted in 1967 on a second degree grand larceny charge arising out of a dis turbancc in a local restaurant in December 1966. Ferraro is serving time in Green Haven Prison.

The motion was filed by Ferraro's attorney Alex Wiltsie in county court and County Judge Raymond J. Mino reserved decision Wednesday.

Wiltsie in presenting his motion said that since his client's conviction new evidence had been discovered. Wiltsie said that George M. (Mickey) Leonard, now serving time in Dannemora Prison pleaded guilty to the charges stemming from the case and on this basis his client should be given a new trial.

The arrests resulted from a disturbance on Dec. 13, 1966 in the Vineyard Restaurant, 272 Fair Street. During the disturbance police charged that $150 was taken from the cash register.

Assistant Disetrict Attorney Robert MacKinnon answering the plea for a new trial said that both of the convicted men were involved in the disturbance and ultimate theft of the money and therefore a plea of guilty by one defendant would not indicate that the other was innocent.

Compass Plants

Leaves of compass plants point north and south, a characteristic caused by the twisting of the leaf stalks. Many theories have been advanced as to the reason. One explanation is that the leaves bend not to escape the heavy midday sunlight but to get the full early morning and late afternoon sunlight.

Action Hints Tax Opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has cleared a $3 billion segment of President Johnson's tax program amid indications its key committee may be softening its opposition to the proposed income tax hike.

But a move already is under way in the Senate that could further endanger the administration's over-all tax program.

The House passed Thursday, without even calling the roll, legislation to continue beyond their April 1 drop-off dates the present excise taxes on automobiles and telephone service. The bill also provides for a speed-up in corporation income tax collections.

The proposed 10 per cent income tax surcharge remains bottled up in the House Ways and Means Committee. Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., said he is looking for more budget cutting before considering the tax increase.

But Mills conceded—for perhaps the first time since Johnson offered the tax boost plan last year—that certain circumstances could force Congress' hand on the tax hike.

Mino Reserves New Trial Bid

A motion for a new trial was filed for Peter Ferraro, 27, of this city, who was convicted in 1967 on a second degree grand larceny charge arising out of a dis turbance in a local restaurant in December 1966. Ferraro is serving time in Green Haven Prison.

The motion was filed by Ferraro's attorney Alex Wiltsie in county court and County Judge Raymond J. Mino reserved decision Wednesday.

Wiltsie in presenting his motion said that since his client's conviction new evidence had been discovered. Wiltsie said that George M. (Mickey) Leonard, now serving time in Dannemora Prison pleaded guilty to the charges stemming from the case and on this basis his client should be given a new trial.

The arrests resulted from a disturbance on Dec. 13, 1966 in the Vineyard Restaurant, 272 Fair Street. During the disturbance police charged that $150 was taken from the cash register.

Assistant Disetrict Attorney Robert MacKinnon answering the plea for a new trial said that both of the convicted men were involved in the disturbance and ultimate theft of the money and therefore a plea of guilty by one defendant would not indicate that the other was innocent.

Compass Plants

Leaves of compass plants point north and south, a characteristic caused by the twisting of the leaf stalks. Many theories have been advanced as to the reason. One explanation is that the leaves bend not to escape the heavy midday sunlight but to get the full early morning and late afternoon sunlight.

Dear Abby

It's a Matter of Choice

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
[© 1968 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: I am going to have my first baby in six months, and both my husband and I are excited about it. A friend told me that if I let my doctor give me something to knock me out during the labor and delivery I will miss the greatest thrill a woman can know,—hearing her baby's first cry. She said when she had her baby, she knew what was going on every minute and she wouldn't have missed it for the world.

I talked to my doctor about this, and he said he gives his patients something to keep them as comfortable as possible, and for a doctor to deliver babies any other way is brutal and unnecessary. Now I don't know what to do. I hate to change doctors, but I don't want to cheat myself out of a woman's greatest thrill. My husband says it's up to me. Have you (or any of your readers) any experience in this line?

HAVING A BABY

DEAR HAVING: I have had two experiences. For Number One (a daughter), I was "knocked out." For Number Two (a son), I was wide awake. If I had had it to do all over again, I'd elect to be knocked out, thank you.

Enjoy the "thirll" of hearing your baby's ninth or tenth cry. It's the same as the first, and it won't take long before the crying loses its charm, and the novelty wears off.

DEAR ABBY: Not long ago a mother wrote to you complaining because a girl who looked to be "not much older" than her 17-year-old son was sent in by the doctor to stand by the table while her son had a lamp treatment for a skin ailment. The mother said the boy was embarrassed and refused to go back for another treatment because of this girl.

Then a REGISTERED NURSE wrote in saying the girl HAD to be at least 21 to be a nurse.

Who said she was a NURSE? I have worked in doctors' offices, have worn a nurse's uniform and a nurse's cap, and have been called "nurse," but I am not a nurse. And I think if you will inquire, you will find that this is true in many doctors' offices today. And dentists', also. Sincerely,

GIRL IN WHITE

How do you handle the problem of voids when using Blackwood?

If you are void of a suit try to approach the slam by some other means. We told you not to bid Blackwood with a worthless doubleton in an unbid suit. Similarly don't bid four no-trump when you are void of a suit. You have various scientific methods at your disposal. All of these frequently pinpoint the right lead in case your partner can't control the suit you are afraid of. Sometimes the best way to bid that type slam is to jump right there and hope that your opponents won't find the killing lead.

When your partner uses Blackwood and you hold a void there is an approved way to show the void. It is as follows: If you think your void is a good one, jump to six in the suit you would have bid five in as a normal Blackwood response.

North's jump to six diamonds showed that he had one ace and was void of a suit. It also had to be a good void. It couldn't be diamonds—North had bid that suit. It shouldn't be spades — South had bid that suit. Hence, it had to be clubs.

South's jump to seven hearts was still a trifle optimistic. North did not have to hold the king of hearts for his bids.

As a matter of fact, South wasn't too happy when he saw the dummy. He had to ruff the first club which left him with only three trumps in dummy. He would have to set up either his spades or dummy's diamonds and decided to go after the diamonds because the odds favor a 3-2 break when you miss five cards.

He led the ace of diamonds at trick two and ruffed a diamond with the queen of trumps. Then he led a trump to dummy's king and ruffed another diamond with his ace of trumps. Since this accounted for all the diamonds he simply played out dummy's last two trumps to pick up East's and made the rest of the tricks with the rest of the diamond suit and his ace and king of spades.

The stern-looking priest, a man noted for his didactic skill, told his students they must study hard if they wanted a passing grade.

The two young ladies, spending their first night in a large city, agreed to go to a movie that had some didactic as well as entertainment value.

How do you handle the problem of voids when using Blackwood?

If you are void of a suit try to approach the slam by some other means. We told you not to bid Blackwood with a worthless doubleton in an unbid suit. Similarly don't bid four no-trump when you are void of a suit. You have various scientific methods at your disposal. All of these frequently pinpoint the right lead in case your partner can't control the suit you are afraid of. Sometimes the best way to bid that type slam is to jump right there and hope that your opponents won't find the killing lead.

When your partner uses Blackwood and you hold a void there is an approved way to show the void. It is as follows: If you think your void is a good one, jump to six in the suit you would have bid five in as a normal Blackwood response.

North's jump to six diamonds showed that he had one ace and was void of a suit. It also had to be a good void. It couldn't be diamonds—North had bid that suit. It shouldn't be spades — South had bid that suit. Hence, it had to be clubs.

South's jump to seven hearts was still a trifle optimistic. North did not have to hold the king of hearts for his bids.

As a matter of fact, South wasn't too happy when he saw the dummy. He had to ruff the first club which left him with only three trumps in dummy. He would have to set up either his spades or dummy's diamonds and decided to go after the diamonds because the odds favor a 3-2 break when you miss five cards.

He led the ace of diamonds at trick two and ruffed a diamond with the queen of trumps. Then he led a trump to dummy's king and ruffed another diamond with his ace of trumps. Since this accounted for all the diamonds he simply played out dummy's last two trumps to pick up East's and made the rest of the tricks with the rest of the diamond suit and his ace and king of spades.

A motorist stopped by a traffic policeman for driving without a taillight, rushed to the rear of the car and began moaning. His distress moved the patrolman to ease up a bit.

The motorist cried,

Mr. Lane—It isn't? What happened to my trailer?

Many of the girls enjoyed going out with Rod, the young college instructor, because the evening was always pleasant, interesting, and didactic.

The stern-looking priest, a man noted for his didactic skill, told his students they must study hard if they wanted a passing grade.

The two young ladies, spending their first night in a large city, agreed to go to a movie that had some didactic as well as entertainment value.

Costumes Carol's Best Help

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — From the opening number, "Diamonds are a Girl's Best Friend," to the windup when the cast sang "Hello, Dolly!" Carol Channing almost singlehandedly managed to keep her special moving along Thursday night.

Plenty Around

There were plenty of other people around. The 80-voice West Point choir sang a medley of service songs. There was "The Association" in Dickensian clothes doing a number. George Burns turned up for what amounted to a long walk on. Eddy Arnold had a song or two to sing. Walter Matthau, a fine actor, was a guest star but since he is no song and dance man and is not a standup comic, neither he nor anyone else seemed to know what to have him do.

If Miss Channing had any real costars, it was her costume and set designer and the cameramen. Her clothes were stunning, the sets handsome, and the color photography excellent. One could only wish that the substance of the show had been as attractive.

Carol, a comedienne with a very distinctive style, is not at her best in front of the television cameras. But she has the elusive quality called star power and seems to be able to invest amusement into pretty dreary material. She can sell a song effectively and dance a bit, too. But even her considerable resources were under strain in the special.

Most amusing number was an illustrated song kidding the superstars of the silent movies—Mary Pickford, the innocent maiden; Pearl White, the adventuresome type, and Theda Bara, the vamp. Miss Channing in some pretty wild get-ups, played all the parts.

Vacation for Jerry

NBC apparently has decided to give Jerry Lewis and company a summer vacation. It has announced a half-hour series, "Showcase 68" which will start on June 11 and run until early September. Each show will present young professional musicians, with winners picked each night by a panel of judges. These winners will wind up the series with an hour show on Sept. 3.

Recommended weekend viewing:

Tonight—"The Soviets in Space," NBC, 10-11 EST, a report of Russian progress with some film made at installations hitherto closed to the press.

Sunday — "Passport to Prague," NBC, 3-4 p.m., a drama in the "Experiment in Television" series, made in two languages and filmed in Czechoslovakia; "A Hatful of Rain," ABC, 9-11, adaptation of a Broadway drama by Michael Gazzo which takes up the problem of drug addiction, with Sandy Dennis, Michael Parks and Peter Falk.

Costumes Carol's Best Help

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — From the opening number, "Diamonds are a Girl's Best Friend," to the windup when the cast sang "Hello, Dolly!" Carol Channing almost singlehandedly managed to keep her special moving along Thursday night.

Plenty Around

There were plenty of other people around. The 80-voice West Point choir sang a medley of service songs. There was "The Association" in Dickensian clothes doing a number. George Burns turned up for what amounted to a long walk on. Eddy Arnold had a song or two to sing. Walter Matthau, a fine actor, was a guest star but since he is no song and dance man and is not a standup comic, neither he nor anyone else seemed to know what to have him do.

If Miss Channing had any real costars, it was her costume and set designer and the cameramen. Her clothes were stunning, the sets handsome, and the color photography excellent. One could only wish that the substance of the show had been as attractive.

Carol, a comedienne with a very distinctive style, is not at her best in front of the television cameras. But she has the elusive quality called star power and seems to be able to invest amusement into pretty dreary material. She can sell a song effectively and dance a bit, too. But even her considerable resources were under strain in the special.

Most amusing number was an illustrated song kidding the superstars of the silent movies—Mary Pickford, the innocent maiden; Pearl White, the adventuresome type, and Theda Bara, the vamp. Miss Channing in some pretty wild get-ups, played all the parts.

Vacation for Jerry

NBC apparently has decided to give Jerry Lewis and company a summer vacation. It has announced a half-hour series, "Showcase 68" which will start on June 11 and run until early September. Each show will present young professional musicians, with winners picked each night by a panel of judges. These winners will wind up the series with an hour show on Sept. 3.

Recommended weekend viewing:

Tonight—"The Soviets in Space," NBC, 10-11 EST, a report of Russian progress with some film made at installations hitherto closed to the press.

Sunday — "Passport to Prague," NBC, 3-4 p.m., a drama in the "Experiment in Television" series, made in two languages and filmed in Czechoslovakia; "A Hatful of Rain," ABC, 9-11, adaptation of a Broadway drama by Michael Gazzo which takes up the problem of drug addiction, with Sandy Dennis, Michael Parks and Peter Falk.

Reputed Hardliner on Viet War Takes Over Defense Chores Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clark M. Clifford, reputedly a hard-liner on the Vietnam war, takes the oath today as the nation's ninth secretary of defense.

President Johnson planned to look on as Chief Justice Earl Warren administered the oath to the 61-year-old Washington lawyer at a White House ceremony.

Clifford was overlooked by many of the spectators who stood in the rain Thursday outside the Pentagon to applaud outgoing Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

But today Clifford becomes the Pentagon's kingpin, boss of 3.4 million military men, more than one million civilian employes and a spending budget of about $76 billion.

There has been speculation that Clifford, who left one of Washington's most prosperous law practices, may serve as kind of a caretaker Pentagon chief until after the November election.

By this reasoning, Johnson would have a trusted long-time associate in the critical post during the election year and then—if re-elected—could search for a longer term Cabinet officer if Clifford preferred to return to law.

At his late-January confirmation hearing before the Senate Armed Services Committee, Clifford testified that in accepting Johnson's call he had not placed any limitation on the period he was willing to serve.

"I am ready and prepared to serve for whatever length of time he chooses me to do so," Clifford said.

The new defense chief has had a long association with defense matters, dating back to Truman administration days when he helped write the law which unified the military services.

As an adviser to Johnson, he has been in on many of the critical White House conferences at which major decisions on the course of the Vietnam war have been made.

Although not yet secretary, he participated this week in White House conferences reappraising U.S. strategy in Vietnam and considering what sources said was a request by Gen. William C. Westmoreland for about 100,000 more U.S. troops in Vietnam.

Sources in position to know picture Clifford as something more of a hard-liner on Vietnam than McNamara has been, although the degree of difference is said to have been less than a gulf.

Clifford made it plain to the Armed Services Committee that he stands opposed to any cessation to the bombing of North Vietnam, although he acknowledged conditions could change.

The new secretary has had no formal briefings at the Pentagon in preparation for assuming his job. He has, however, attended several luncheons and meetings in the Pentagon with McNamara, other top civilian officials and members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Riot Control Plans Massive

WASHINGTON (AP) — In city after city across America, police are stockpiling weapons of war—armored vehicles, helicopters, high-powered rifles.

They are recruiting civilians as ready reserves.

They are training squads of sharp-shooters.

They are sending undercover agents into the slums.

Quietly but ominously, an Associated Press survey shows, they are preparing for summer and the riots they hope won't occur.

Even riot veterans are awed by some weapons developed in the aftermath of Watts, Newark and Detroit.

In Los Angeles, policemen watched the demonstration model of a 20-ton armored personnel carrier crush a barricade of abandoned cars.

The tank-like vehicle can carry 20 men in bulletproof safety. It can be equipped with a .30-caliber machine gun, tear-gas launchers, a smoke-screen device, chemical fire extinguishers and a siren which disables rioters with a curdling sound.

"When I look at this thing," said Deputy Chief Daryl Gates, "I think, my God, I hope we'll never have to use it.

"But then I realize how valuable it would have been in Watts, where we had nothing to protect us from sniper fire when we tried to rescue wounded officers."

"We might as well be prepared."

Police in most cities are tempering this show of firmness, however, with massive efforts to improve their relations with slum dwellers—"our first defense against riots," said Chief Thomas Reddin of Los Angeles.

Los Angeles police admit they are seriously interested in buying the armored vehicle. One drawback is the price: $35,000, without optional equipment.

The Los Angeles sheriff's office overcame the cost factor by purchasing a surplus Army M-8 armored car for $2,500, then outfitting it as a "rescue vehicle."

Detroit Used Five

Five armored vehicles cruised Detroit's streets last summer during the riot that left 43 dead. Since then, Detroit police have stocked up on 100 pairs of binoculars, 2,000 tear-gas grenades and 1,200 gas masks and have asked for 25 special antisniper rifles, 500 carbines, 300 shotguns and 150,000 rounds of ammunition.

In neighboring Monroe County, the sheriff is spending his $50,000 riot-control fund on a $13,500 armored truck, 15 walkie-talkies, 100 rifles, 15,000 rounds of ammunition, 500 tear-gas canisters and flak vests.

Oakland County, a Detroit suburb, also is obtaining an Army half-track. Said Prosecutor S. Jerome Bronson: "We have learned from mistakes made elsewhere in the country that there is no substitute for firmness."

Kid Gloves Removed

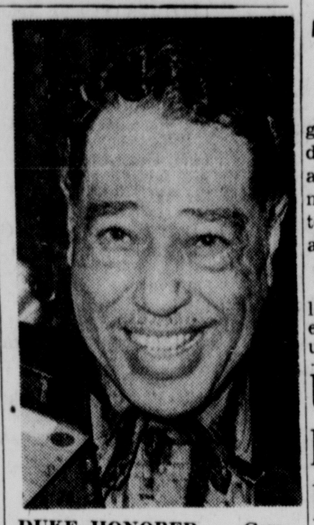

A thousand miles to the south, Police Chief James G. Littleton of Tampa, Fa., put it another way: "We have taken off the kid gloves with those elements who cause riots."

The Tampa arsenal, he said, includes 162 shotguns, 150 bayonets, 5 sniper rifles, 25 carbines and M1 rifles, 300 gas masks. And State Atty. Paul Antinori has recommended that Tampa policemen "shoot to kill" persons observed committing or about to commit, felonies during a riot.

Back in Michigan, Gov. George Romney and mayors of 18 cities adopted this week a multipoint plan to head off riots. Romney has asked the legislature for $1 million to finance police riot training and hopes to get another $500,000 from federal sources.

The Michigan state police have hired 225 new patrolmen, plus 20 men for its intelligence section, and wants to buy a helicopter.

Chicago already has acquired helicopters and is training four pilots. The department's highly mobile 600-man task force has been instructing the city's 11,500 other policemen in crowd control and use of heavy weapons.

Sun rises at 6:32 a.m.; sun sets at 5:45 p.m., EST.

Weather: Windy, cold.

The Temperature

The lowest temperature recorded on The Freeman thermometer during the night was 31 degrees. The highest figure recorded up to noon today was 29 degrees.

Lows in the teens and low 20s. Partly cloudy to cloudy Saturday. Chance of snow flurries in the afternoon. Highs in the upper 20s to low 30s. Ray Returning To Desk Monday

Mayor Raymond W. Garraghan will return to his official duties after a month's leave of absence Monday morning. The mayor had intended to return today but has decided to take a long weekend.

Going to Dem. Dinner

The mayor will make at least one public appearance over the weekend. He is scheduled to be the main speaker at the Democratic Party victory dinner Sunday night at the Walnut Grove.

The party will honor Garraghan, T. Robert Gallo, alderman-at large, the eight aldermen elected in the city and the two county legislators.

The mayor took a leave of absence immediately after signing the budget in his office Jan. 22. He said at the time he had been ill since October and was taking off until March 1 at the advice of his doctor.

Garraghan's replacement was Gallo, newly elected alderman-at-large and former Ninth Ward alderman. During his absence there were widespread rumors that he would not come back.

'Never Been Away'

In fact, he was never away. He's been in his office almost every day for the past two weeks for a few hours and in the first two weeks of his absence he called his office regularily, keeping in touch on city matters.

The first week's rest was just what the doctor ordered and apparently has been of great benefit to the mayor. Said his secretary yesterday. "The mayor was in today for a few hours and he looks wonderful."

Ulster Vols Have Unusual Fire: Theirs

Ulster Hose Company firefighters responded to an unusual call at about 1:45 a. m. today, after receiving a report that Fire Station 1 was on fire.

Chief William Williams and Lt. Thomas Davis were in command of Engine 3 unit, which is quartered in Station 1.

There was no fire, according to a company spokesman, who said the door of the furnace had either dropped off or it was blown off, possibly by a backdraft.

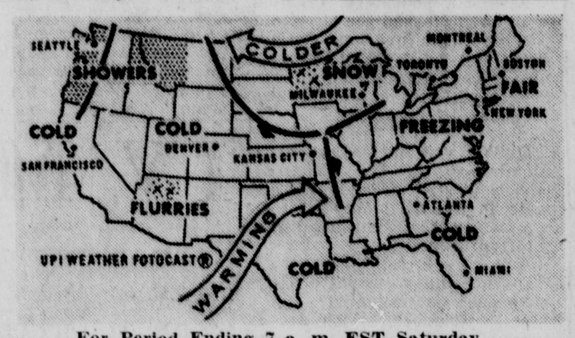

As a safety precaution, Engine 3 apparatus was driven out the front door of the firehouse to the rear of the building, but it was not needed.

Town Superintendent of Highways Edgar P. Elliott was on his way to work at the Town Barn when he saw what appeared to be flames in one room of Station 1. He sounded the alarm. The "flames" proved to be the reflection of the fire in the furnace.

Repairs were made to the boiler and firemen drove the truck back into the firehouse and checked back in service at about 2:15 a. m.

Name Changer

Ho Chi Minh, founder and first president of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (North Vietnam), has twice changed his original name. As a young revolutionary in France, he chose the name of Nguyen Ai Quoc, which means "Friend of the People." In 1941, he changed it to Ho Chi Minh, which means "Brilliant One."

For Period Ending 7 a. m. EST Saturday

Tonight, will find snow or snow flurries in Minnesota and parts of the Southern Rockies. Showers are in store for the extreme Northern Plateaus and the North Pacific coast. Elsewhere, fair to partly cloudy skies should prevail. Colder weather is expected in New England and the Northern Plains. A warming trend is forecast for the Southern Plateaus Eastward into the Mississippi Valley. Minimum temperatures include: Atlanta 22; Boston 22; Chicago 27; Denver 30; Ft. Worth 39; Duluth 15; Jacksonville 33; Kansas City 28; Los Angeles 52; Miami 60; New Orleans 30; New York 20; San Francisco 54; Seattle 45; St. Louis 28 and Washington 19.

Howling Night For the Area As March Bows

The first winds of March didn't make anybody's "heart a dancer."

With lion-like ferocity, high winds battered the Mid-Hudson Valley overnight and are expected to continue their onslaught through today.

Although the immediate Kingston area got rain, other areas got snow accumulations ranging from a trace in Saugerties to 12 inches at Highmount. Belleayre Ski Center reported eight inches of new snow with the fall expected to continue through this afternoon. Other county reports indicated three inches at Highland; two inches in Bearsville-Woodstock and six inches at Phoenicia.

Icy roads and drifting snow caused school closings in Highland, Marlboro, Pine Plains, Millbrook, Hyde Park and Dutchess Community College. Hunter - Tannersville schools were on snow holiday also.

Scattered wind damage plagued parts of the county during the night and Central-Hudson was still receiving reports of line damage this morning. Trees, tree limbs, television antennas and signs bore the brunt of winds which were said to reach gusts of up to 40 miles an hour. In Glenerie Lake Park, Route 9-W, a bus shelter was upended.

When the Lion roars in can the Lamb be far behind? Extended forecasts say yes. Temperatures are expected to be below normal through Wednesday with cold predicted for the weekend.

If all rain fell at once, the earth would be covered with three feet of water.

Fire Truck, Car Collide

An accident involving a fire engine from Kingston's Wiltwyck Station sent two men to city hospitals last night.

The mishap occurred at 6:30 p. m. when Engine Two, driven by Robert Millham, 38, of 228 Main Street, was responding to a fire call on Gage Street.

Doctor's Ambulance took Cashara to Benedictine Hospital. He suffered broken front teeth and a laceration of the left leg.

Engine Two had been proceeding to a fire at 83 Gage Street. A two-story frame house, owned by Janette Snyder, was involved.

Firefighters, under the direction of Capt. Edwin Murphy, put the fire out with pressurized water.

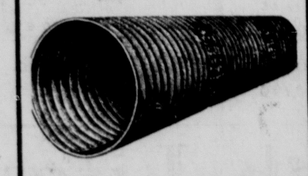

There was little property damage and the firemen returned to the station at 6:45 p. m.

Kingston's firefighters also were called out into the rain and snow at 2:22 a. m. to respond to a blaze at Markle's Radio and Television Sales and Service, 381 Washington Avenue.

The presumed cause of the fire was a short in a neon sign. There was some damage to cornices and shingles and the thick smoke in the building was soon ventilated.

Chief James M. Brett and Captain Murphy were in charge.

Even riot veterans are awed by some weapons developed in the aftermath of Watts, Newark and Detroit.

In Los Angeles, policemen watched the demonstration model of a 20-ton armored personnel carrier crush a barricade of abandoned cars.

The tank-like vehicle can carry 20 men in bulletproof safety. It can be equipped with a .30-caliber machine gun, tear-gas launchers, a smoke-screen device, chemical fire extinguishers and a siren which disables rioters with a curdling sound.

"When I look at this thing," said Deputy Chief Daryl Gates, "I think, my God, I hope we'll never have to use it.

"But then I realize how valuable it would have been in Watts, where we had nothing to protect us from sniper fire when we tried to rescue wounded officers."

"We might as well be prepared."

Police in most cities are tempering this show of firmness, however, with massive efforts to improve their relations with slum dwellers—"our first defense against riots," said Chief Thomas Reddin of Los Angeles.

Los Angeles police admit they are seriously interested in buying the armored vehicle. One drawback is the price: $35,000, without optional equipment.

The Los Angeles sheriff's office overcame the cost factor by purchasing a surplus Army M-8 armored car for $2,500, then outfitting it as a "rescue vehicle."

Detroit Used Five

Five armored vehicles cruised Detroit's streets last summer during the riot that left 43 dead. Since then, Detroit police have stocked up on 100 pairs of binoculars, 2,000 tear-gas grenades and 1,200 gas masks and have asked for 25 special antisniper rifles, 500 carbines, 300 shotguns and 150,000 rounds of ammunition.

In neighboring Monroe County, the sheriff is spending his $50,000 riot-control fund on a $13,500 armored truck, 15 walkie-talkies, 100 rifles, 15,000 rounds of ammunition, 500 tear-gas canisters and flak vests.

Oakland County, a Detroit suburb, also is obtaining an Army half-track. Said Prosecutor S. Jerome Bronson: "We have learned from mistakes made elsewhere in the country that there is no substitute for firmness."

Kid Gloves Removed

A thousand miles to the south, Police Chief James G. Littleton of Tampa, Fa., put it another way: "We have taken off the kid gloves with those elements who cause riots."

The Tampa arsenal, he said, includes 162 shotguns, 150 bayonets, 5 sniper rifles, 25 carbines and M1 rifles, 300 gas masks. And State Atty. Paul Antinori has recommended that Tampa policemen "shoot to kill" persons observed committing or about to commit, felonies during a riot.

Back in Michigan, Gov. George Romney and mayors of 18 cities adopted this week a multipoint plan to head off riots. Romney has asked the legislature for $1 million to finance police riot training and hopes to get another $500,000 from federal sources.

The Michigan state police have hired 225 new patrolmen, plus 20 men for its intelligence section, and wants to buy a helicopter.

Chicago already has acquired helicopters and is training four pilots. The department's highly mobile 600-man task force has been instructing the city's 11,500 other policemen in crowd control and use of heavy weapons.

The Weather

FRIDAY, MARCH 1, 1968

Sun rises at 6:32 a.m.; sun sets at 5:45 p.m., EST.

Weather: Windy, cold.

The Temperature

The lowest temperature recorded on The Freeman thermometer during the night was 31 degrees. The highest figure recorded up to noon today was 29 degrees.

Lower Hudson Valley:

Snow tapering off to flurries, windy and turning colder today. Total snow accumulation of 3 to 5 inches. Temperatures dropping into the 20s this afternoon. Partly cloudy, windy and colder tonight. Lows in the teens and low 20s. Partly cloudy to cloudy Saturday. Chance of snow flurries in the afternoon. Highs in the upper 20s to low 30s. Northerly winds, 15 to 30, gusty today, diminishing slowly tonight, becoming west to northwest, 10 to 20, Saturday.

Ray Returning To Desk Monday

Mayor Raymond W. Garraghan will return to his official duties after a month's leave of absence Monday morning. The mayor had intended to return today but has decided to take a long weekend.

Going to Dem. Dinner

The mayor will make at least one public appearance over the weekend. He is scheduled to be the main speaker at the Democratic Party victory dinner Sunday night at the Walnut Grove.

The party will honor Garraghan, T. Robert Gallo, alderman-at large, the eight aldermen elected in the city and the two county legislators.

The mayor took a leave of absence immediately after signing the budget in his office Jan. 22. He said at the time he had been ill since October and was taking off until March 1 at the advice of his doctor.

Garraghan's replacement was Gallo, newly elected alderman-at-large and former Ninth Ward alderman. During his absence there were widespread rumors that he would not come back.

'Never Been Away'

In fact, he was never away. He's been in his office almost every day for the past two weeks for a few hours and in the first two weeks of his absence he called his office regularly, keeping in touch on city matters.

The first week's rest was just what the doctor ordered and apparently has been of great benefit to the mayor. Said his secretary yesterday. "The mayor was in today for a few hours and he looks wonderful."

Ulster Vols Have Unusual Fire: Theirs

Ulster Hose Company firefighters responded to an unusual call at about 1:45 a. m. today, after receiving a report that Fire Station 1 was on fire.

Chief William Williams and Lt. Thomas Davis were in command of Engine 3 unit, which is quartered in Station 1.

There was no fire, according to a company spokesman, who said the door of the furnace had either dropped off or it was blown off, possibly by a backdraft.

As a safety precaution, Engine 3 apparatus was driven out the front door of the firehouse to the rear of the building, but it was not needed.

Town Superintendent of Highways Edgar P. Elliott was on his way to work at the Town Barn when he saw what appeared to be flames in one room of Station 1. He sounded the alarm. The "flames" proved to be the reflection of the fire in the furnace.

Repairs were made to the boiler and firemen drove the truck back into the firehouse and checked back in service at about 2:15 a. m.

Name Changer

Ho Chi Minh, founder and first president of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (North Vietnam), has twice changed his original name. As a young revolutionary in France, he chose the name of Nguyen Ai Quoc, which means "Friend of the People." In 1941, he changed it to Ho Chi Minh, which means "Brilliant One."

Howling Night For the Area As March Bows

The first winds of March didn't make anybody's "heart a dancer."

With lion-like ferocity, high winds battered the Mid-Hudson Valley overnight and are expected to continue their onslaught through today.

Although the immediate Kingston area got rain, other areas got snow accumulations ranging from a trace in Saugerties to 12 inches at Highmount. Belleayre Ski Center reported eight inches of new snow with the fall expected to continue through this afternoon. Other county reports indicated three inches at Highland; two inches in Bearsville-Woodstock and six inches at Phoenicia.

Icy roads and drifting snow caused school closings in Highland, Marlboro, Pine Plains, Millbrook, Hyde Park and Dutchess Community College, Hunter - Tannersville schools were on snow holiday also.

Scattered wind damage plagued parts of the county during the night and Central-Hudson was still receiving reports of line damage this morning. Trees, tree limbs, television antennas and signs bore the brunt of winds which were said to reach gusts of up to 40 miles an hour. In Glenerie Lake Park, Route 9-W, a bus shelter was upended.

When the Lion roars in can the Lamb be far behind? Extended forecasts say yes. Temperatures are expected to be below normal through Wednesday with cold predicted for the weekend.

If all rain fell at once, the earth would be covered with three feet of water.

Fire Truck, Car Collide

An accident involving a fire engine from Kingston's Wiltwyck Station sent two men to city hospitals last night.

The mishap occurred at 6:30 p. m. when Engine Two, driven by Robert Millham, 38, of 228 Main Street, was responding to a fire call on Gage Street.

The engine was proceeding north on Albany Avenue, accord to police reports, with its flashing red lights and siren in operation.

It was at this time when a car driven by 18-year-old Alex V. Cashara, of 43 Stephan Street, reportedly pulled out in front of the 1948 Mack fire truck causing the collision.

Doctor's Ambulance took Cashara to Benedictine Hospital. He suffered broken front teeth and a laceration of the left leg.

Cashara was given a summons for failure to yield the right of way.

Engine Two had been proceeding to a fire at 83 Gage Street. A two-story frame house, owned by Janette Snyder, was involved.

At the heart of the blaze was a smoldering overstuffed chair.

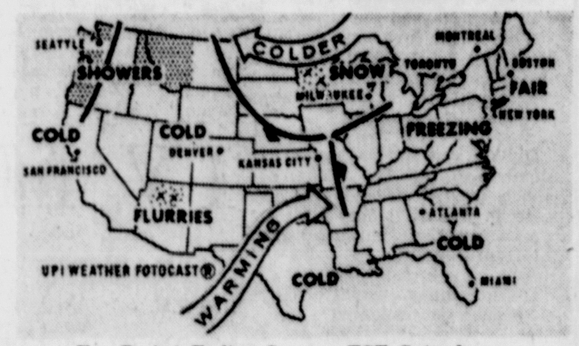

Firefighters, under the direction of Capt. Edwin Murphy, put the fire out with pressurized water.

There was little property damage and the firemen returned to the station at 6:45 p. m.

Kingston's firefighters also were called out into the rain and snow at 2:22 a. m. to respond to a blaze at Markle's Radio and Television Sales and Service, 381 Washington Avenue.

The presumed cause of the fire was a short in a neon sign. There was some damage to cornices and shingles and the thick smoke in the building was soon ventilated.

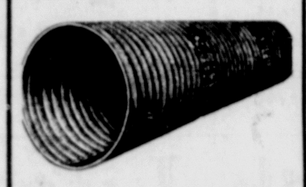

Chief James M. Brett and Captain Murphy were in charge.
